BE CAREFUL!

This is an injunction of national importance at the present time. Apart, however, from the need of the observance of carefulness for the well-being of the nation—it is certain that the cultivation of this quality always brings substantial rewards in every department of life. Careful people avoid much inconvenience and many troubles which beset the path of the heedless. The importance of carefulness in regard to matters concerning the general health will be obvious to all. Careful people keep a watch upon their digestive powers, recognising that any weakening of these is frequently the cause of indisposition and illness. They hold themselves ready, and take, when necessary, such a remedy as Beecham's Pills. This is an excellent idea and a wise precaution. A periodical dose of

is a great safeguard. Beecham's Pills regulate the bowels, give tone to the stomach, correct the action of the liver, restore the appetite, and improve the digestion generally. They have proved of great value to many thousands of people. Beecham's Pills have long years of great success behind them; the alleviation of many illnesses to their credit; in fact, a better family medicine is not to be found. They are compounded with great care from vegetable sources remarkable for their curative qualities, and as a digestive, tonic and aperient medicine you will find they

War Strain.

Most of us are feeling the strain. Some of us from overwork. Others from anxiety about friends or relatives at the Front, or business prospects under the uncertain and ever-changing conditions of trade. True—many of us are unduly apprehensive. We simply cannot avoid being so. It is a question of nerves. The one remedy is to safeguard our health by ensuring sound, refreshing, revigorating sleep. The gives complete rest to every muscle of the body. It represents the last word in modern scientific mattress construction.

Vi-Spring Mattress

The Resident Medical Officer reported that 70 patients had been admitted during the past month; 833 accidents were treated; 798 attendances at the dispensaries; remaining in hospital 107.

The Board regret that owing to lack of funds they have to limit the number of patients admitted.

Messrs. Thomas Dockrell's tender for the general upkeep of electrical installation was accepted for the ensuing year.

The Lady Superintendent would be much obliged to those friends who were kind enough to lend blankets, pillows, rugs, etc., during the recent disturbances in the city, if they would have same called for at the hospital before the 17th instant. If not convenient to send for these articles, the Lady Superintendent would be pleased to have same delivered if so desired. The articles claimed should be clearly specified.

The Governors will be most grateful to those friends who have not sent in their contributions for 1916 if they will kindly do so now, as the Bank account is £6,021 4/11 overdrawn. They would especially draw the attention of those residents in the Pembroke Township who do not contribute to the support of their own hospital, and who receive the benefit of it for their servants, to help now to wipe out this heavy debt. Five shillings a year from each householder of the Pembroke Township would mean a large increase in our income.

The Board desire it to be known that fully-trained nurses for private cases can be supplied by the hospital at any time during the day or night on application being made to the Lady Superintendent. Telephone No. 52, Ballsbridge; telegraphic address "Gigas," Dublin.

The Ladies' Committee will be most grateful for gifts of cigarettes, tobacco, matches, jam, cakes, and fruit for the soldiers. These luxuries are not provided by the hospital, but the Committee feel that, if the public realised how much their gifts were appreciated, they would gladly contribute towards the comfort of these men. Money to buy any of the above will be gratefully acknowledged by the Lady Superintendent.

The Lady Superintendent begs to acknowledge, with grateful thanks, the following gifts for the hospital:—

Some Striking Testimonials

Telegraphic Address: "Munlin, Cork."
THE MUNSTER AND LEINSTER BANK, LIMITED
General Manager's Office,
Cork, 26th May, 1916.
Dear Sirs,
It gives us pleasure to be able to state that the Milners' Door of the Strong Room at our late Office in Sackville street, Dublin, resisted most successfully the fierce fire by which these premises were destroyed during the recent disturbances, with the result that the entire of the contents of the Strong Room—books, cash, securities, etc.—were found absolutely intact and uninjured.
Yours faithfully,
T. B. LILLIS,
General Manager.

5 Bachelor's Walk, Dublin,
11th May, 1916.
Messrs. Milners' Safe Co., Ltd., Dublin.
Dear Sirs,
I am very pleased to record that my Milner Safe preserved its contents in a most satisfactory manner, in the recent terrific fire in Abbey Chambers, which reduced the buildings on all sides to ruin. I expected to find the documents injured, but everything was intact. The safe was opened with its own key without difficulty; and I should mention that the safe fell from a height of 26 feet, and was buried in smouldering ruins for days.
Yours faithfully,
THOMAS EARLY, Solicitor.

11 Molesworth street, Dublin,
26th May, 1916.
Gentlemen,
You will be glad to hear that your safes, of which we had three at our late Offices, 41 Lower Sackville street, Dublin, have preserved for us most valuable papers.
This is most satisfactory, as our Offices were on the first and second floors of a building three doors from the General Post Office, and which was totally destroyed.
Please deliver as soon as possible the two safes which we ordered.
Yours faithfully,
HENRY and SON, Solicitors.

Dublin, May 12th, 1916.
Messrs. Milners' Safe Co., Ltd.,
21 Dawson street, Dublin.
Dear Sirs,
We think it due to your firm to place on record the fact that our Milners' Safe preserved its contents in perfect condition during the great conflagration which completely destroyed the block of buildings in which our premises were situated. We think this is remarkable, as the safe was buried in the ruins for over a week. We may say the safe is in our possession over thirty years.
Yours faithfully,
J. GAYNOR and SON.

Dear Sirs,
I have pleasure in informing you that our principal books, which I kept in the Milner Safe, purchased from you just two years ago, escaped destruction in the recent conflagration at Eden quay when our premises were totally wrecked. The contents of the books were preserved intact.
Yours faithfully,

Dear Sirs,—We have much pleasure in testifying to the efficiency of your fire-proof safe, which stood the determined attack from burglary, all contents being safe.
It is a matter of interest to note that our building was right beside the now notorious "Liberty Hall," which was destroyed by shell fire from a gun-boat, and our building was also destroyed in a similar manner.
Yours faithfully,

Gentlemen,
Referring to the larger safe which you delivered to us a few days before the recent troubles, in exchange for the smaller one which you sold to us some years ago, we think it is only right that we should inform you that, although it is quite evident that the mob by whom our premises were looted did everything in their power to break open this safe, and evidently used very heavy implements for the purpose, they were quite unsuccessful, and we found the contents, both cash as well as our books and valuable documents, absolutely intact.
We beg to remain, Dear Sirs,
Yours respectfully,

Dear Sirs,
I wish to convey to you my extreme satisfaction in the case of my Milners' Safe, which has stood the test, and everything inside complete, after two desperate attempts to open it; the first attack ten years ago, and the other during the recent rebellion, when the looters were in possession of my premises for over three days.
This confirms my conviction that your safes are unequalled for reliability.
Yours faithfully,
GEO. NORTON.

Gents,—We were agreeably surprised in regaining possession of our premises, after being in hands of a looting mob for two days, to find our Milners' Safe and contents intact—although persistent efforts had been made to break it open, it completely baffled the looters. In addition to all our books, there was a considerable sum of money in the safe. We consider this a striking testimony to the reliability of your safes.

NEW CHURCH TO OUR LADY OF LOURDES,
LOWER GLOUCESTER STREET, DUBLIN.

A temporary edifice has been erected on the site secured for the New Church, which is so badly needed in this locality.

It is already overcrowded, and the Shrine has aroused a deep spirit of Devotion to Our Lady of Lourdes, with most beneficial results amongst the people.

The temporary structure must serve until the funds necessary to build a permanent Church to Our Lady of Lourdes are collected. The district is the most densely populated and poorest in the city, and, therefore, little pecuniary aid can be expected from it.

The Administrator strongly appeals to the generosity of the Catholics of Dublin and Ireland to assist him in carrying out the good work.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass will be offered each week for subscribers.

Subscriptions will be thankfully received by any of the Clergy, or by Russia Moves.

The continuing success of the great Russian offensive against the Austrians creates a situation in many respects comparable with that which was discovered when the war began nearly two years ago. Then, as now, the Germans engaged their main strength in the west. Then, as now, they counted upon the capacity of the Austrians to hold the Russians away from the eastern frontiers of the Central Empires. The complete failure of the Austrians to execute their expected part in the German plan of campaign in the autumn of 1914 completely upset the whole enemy scheme of operations. They were compelled to stand generally on the defensive in the west throughout the greater part of last year, and to devote their main energy to an attempt to reduce the Russian Army to a state of impotence. That object was not wholly achieved; but the enemy believed that it was achieved sufficiently to justify them in diverting their chief effort once more to the west, in an attempt to achieve a decision against the Western Allies, and to couple that effort with a simultaneous stroke against their new opponent, Italy, in the south. Into the development of this plan of campaign the great Russian thrust has made a rude and sudden intrusion. Its signal success in its early stages encourages us to hope that the campaign of 1916 is destined to repeat the history of the campaign of 1914—with this vital difference, that the Allies in west and south are now, as they were not then, in a position to support the Russian effort with vigorous offensive action from their side. For the second time the Austrians have failed to play their expected part in the German strategic scheme. In 1914 it was the Austrians' part to disturb Russia's slow mobilisation and concentration by a rapid offensive movement. In 1916 no more is required of them by their German masters than that they should maintain a passive defence against the Russians. They will have failed in their duty if they should be able to reconstitute their defence only by dint of calling upon the reserves which are now allotted for offensive operations in the west and south. The Russian offensive will at the least put them to that necessity; and it remains to be seen whether they are capable in any circumstances of restoring an adequate defence against it.

While the Russian offensive is general on the whole front of two hundred miles between the Pripet Marshes and the Rumanian frontier, its main blow is directed just south of the central swampy region of the eastern front. It is directed at the point where the main Austrian line joins the German line. The latest German communiqué informs us, with marked emphasis upon the fact that it is concerned only with the German front, that upon this front there is no change. That is a situation which, if the German description can truly be applied to it now, is not likely to persist much longer. The right wing of the German line must rapidly be drawn back unless the Russians are to be allowed to drive a wedge between it and the Austrian left wing. This wing, which had as its central dépôt the fortress town of Lutsk, has already been broken and driven in a distance of more than twenty miles, and further south the Russians are also advancing. At least three of the five Austrian armies on this front are in general retreat before their onset. The enormous captures of prisoners and guns, particularly in the Lutsk region in the north, in the first three days of the attack is suggestive of something like a rout of the enemy, or, at all events, a deep and wide rupture of their front by the Russians. The feature of the attack upon which the Austrian communiqués and the Vienna and Berlin newspapers lay particular stress is the tremendous weight and power of the Russian artillery preparation. Whatever defects our Allies suffered last year in respect of heavy guns and shells, those defects have been amply made good during the winter. Their decisive superiority in artillery has taken the enemy completely by surprise. The Austrians counted for the security of their defensive front upon the enormous strength of their field fortifications and upon their powerful artillery support. Their trenches were of great depth, heavily protected by vertical cover of solid oak beams, cement, and earth. Behind each series of fortified lines were deep areas of wire entanglement and flanking machine-guns in masked steel casemates. Behind these was concentrated an enormous quantity of artillery, including a large proportion of the famous Skoda heavy guns.

Through these formidable defences the Russian guns have blown an open way for the infantry, and the reply of the Austrian batteries has been wholly ineffective. The conditions in which the Germans were able to begin their great drive through Galicia in the spring of last year appear to be completely reversed. Only the decisive superiority of the German artillery compelled the Russians to the retreat which continued throughout last year until the autumn. Now the Russians, after an industrial revolution of which we had no conception until its results began to be visible in this great offensive, have been able to repeat upon the river fronts of Volhynia and Eastern Galicia the tactics which the enemy employed against them on the Dunajec front in Western Galicia fifteen months ago. Their capture of prisoners, in less than a week's fighting, has now increased to over sixty-four thousand. They have crossed the formidable barriers constituted by the line of the Rivers Styr, Ikya, and Strypa, which the Austrians had heavily fortified for a prolonged stand if their more advanced lines to the east should be overcome. In the greatest strategic movement which the recent months of the war have seen the Russian Armies are still advancing, giving the harried Austrians no pause or rest. All the efforts of the enemy to arrest their advance are so far fruitless. They are now within fifty miles of Lemberg, and there seems to be good ground for hoping that this famous fortress and railway centre will before long change hands for the third time. How far the Russian advance will proceed before the enemy are able to reconstitute a defence adequate to check its progress only the future can show. It is apparent already that our eastern Allies' great effort must exert an influence of capital importance in this year's campaign upon every front. In the meantime, there is one vital conclusion to be drawn from their success. They have not only demolished the Austrian defences in the east; they have demolished also the theory that modern conditions of trench warfare must issue in a deadlock. War is an affair of generalship as well as material. What the Germans have failed to do in the west the Russians have done in the east. They have shown that, with good leading, superior artillery, and resolute infantry, the strategic rupture of an entrenched defensive front is not, as pessimists would have us believe, impossible.

Dublin Losses.

The Committee which is acting for property-owners and traders who suffered by the recent destruction of property now makes public the general statement of claim which was laid before the Home Secretary on Monday. The demands made on the Government by the sufferers are comprehensive, and it is manifest that they represent an enormous sum of money. In the first place, the Government is asked to make such payments as would cover the cost of erecting buildings similar to those destroyed, and replace stock in trade, furniture, machinery, plant, and fixtures. Then there are the damages which the Government is understood to be willing to allow—damage to buildings, furniture, fittings due to gun fire, water, or causes other than the conflagration, and the loss of goods looted or damaged by water or other causes. The further claims relate to damages which are regarded, we suppose, as contingent. In the draft terms of reference to the Compensation Committee, Sir Robert Chalmers excluded claims of that nature from consideration, but we cannot accept that order as a final rejection of them. These claims relate to rents and standing charges such as interest on loans, which will have to be paid while business is suspended; loss of profits during the period until a business is fully restored; and loss of book debts owing to the burning of account books. Some of these claims, as the memorandum submitted by the Committee admits, will be difficult to assess and check, but they ought not to be wholly disallowed on that account. When all the claims are taken together it is plain that the amount needed to cover them, if they were all accepted, would be much in excess of the amount which may be awarded by the Government's Compensation Committee, which is only empowered to award compensation on an insurance basis. This again is no reason for the disallowing of the claims. Everybody knows that the destruction done in Dublin in Easter week was very great, and that the damage, including the loss suffered in the disturbance of business, runs into millions of pounds. It is a heavy load for the already heavily burdened shoulders of the State, and we cannot wonder that the representatives of the State hesitate to assume it. Is there, however, any reason why it, or any portion of it, should be imposed on those property-owners and traders whose property happened to be within the area of destruction, with which they had otherwise nothing to do? We admire the delicate way in which the responsibility of the State for compensation is handled in the memorandum. The suppression of the rebellion, it is represented, was less specially in the interests of the property-owners, or even of Dublin, than in the general interests of the State. That is the politest way of putting the matter, and we can understand the wish of persons who are hoping to get something from the Government not to irritate it by making charges. Persons who have not this reason for reserve, however, do not hesitate to say that the responsibility of the Government is direct, because it allowed the forces of sedition to grow and to equip themselves for the conflict which was so disastrous in its effects on Dublin. This conviction has been deepened by the evidence before the Royal Commission of Inquiry. We hold that the Government is morally liable for every one of the claims made in the memorandum submitted to Mr. Samuel, and the more impressive the amount of these claims appears, the more firmly do we believe that no part of them should fall on the shoulders of individual persons and firms.

Public Schools.

Sir Horace Plunkett enlarged upon a well-tried theme in the address which he gave at St. Columba's College yesterday. He called it the case for the public school. It may be said that the public school needs no case to be made for it. To a large extent that is true; but, as we pointed out the other day, there is some risk that persons who are unduly impressed by the war's revelation of some deficiencies in our educational system may push reform beyond the point of wisdom. It is on this account that we do well to re-assert from time to time the undoubted virtues of public school training—the case, in short, for the public school—not as an argument against sound reforms, but as a check on changes of doubtful expediency. Sir Horace Plunkett, though, as he told his audience, he gained his own first knowledge of public school ways at a time when the typical English public school seemed to have little regard for the needs of modern life, is not insensible to the desirability of some changes in the courses of schools and colleges. He sees, as one of the effects of the war upon the life of Britain, that there will be, as never before, useful work for everybody to do. The education of the young must prepare them to develop their greatest usefulness. What has to be avoided—and this is the value of insistence upon the case for the public school—is the error that such a preparation must necessarily run on strictly utilitarian lines. Sir Horace Plunkett expressed the point simply and well when he said that character counts for so much more than intellect in the service of mankind that there must be something in the corporate life of a good public school which, in the making of character, supplements what is taught in books. Through all the modifications which may be made in school systems as a result of war-time experience and awakening, that "something" must be jealously preserved.

A ROYAL Warrant is published in the London Gazette creating the office of Registrar of the Royal Victorian Order.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

153 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

The claim by a German newspaper that it knew some days before Lord Kitchener's death that he was going on a journey to Russia may, or may not, be well founded. If true, it is possible that the information came from Russia, and not from this country. There is no doubt, however, that the intended journey was known to many people here, some of them of quite humble rank. A correspondent of the Evening Standard states that in a tobacconist's shop last Friday he heard one wounded soldier say to another: "He (Lord Kitchener) can evidently be spared from the War Office, as he goes to Russia next week."

London swarms with foreigners, most of them belonging ostensibly to Allied or neutral nations. Some of them have even been made temporary members of important clubs, where military secrets are often discussed quite openly at the dinner table or in the smoking room. It is to be presumed that inquiries into the past history of these temporary members has been made before they were admitted, but one cannot help wondering whether these inquiries have in all cases been sufficiently searching.

We might intern every German, and, indeed, every foreigner, however, without necessarily or even probably getting rid of the most dangerous kind of spies. There are renegades to be found in every land, who are ready for the sake of money to sell to the enemy any confidential information that they may come across, and they often pose as great patriots. If one could eliminate this class of spy, one would not need to trouble much about the foreign variety.

The most mysterious thing is the method by which the spies transmit their information to the enemy. In spite of the rigid censorship of letters and telegrams, and the supposed destruction of all private wireless installations, there is very little doubt that messages are still conveyed to Germany, and with astonishing rapidity. How, if not, did the Germans get the news of Lord Kitchener's death only an hour after it was known in London? If Scotland Yard could put a stop to this traffic, the spy trouble would soon be reduced to very small dimensions.

Half London believed to-day that something dreadful had happened to Mr. Lloyd George until an official statement that he was present at the Anglo-French War Council put a stop to the rumour. Yesterday there was a similar report regarding Mr. Redmond, which also received a wide credence. Is there an agency for putting these wild stories in circulation, or do they spring up of themselves through the distortion and subsequent exaggeration of some casual remark, as in the case of the alleged rescue of Lord Kitchener?

The suggestion of the Bishop of London that there should be a special Thanksgiving on Sunday for the naval victory is being taken up generally, and it is probable that in most of the metropolitan churches there will be a Te Deum some time during the day, with special hymns of thanksgiving in addition. The National Anthem is now so generally sung as a part of the Service that its rendering can no longer be regarded as a sufficient indication of great national rejoicing. It is now looked upon rather as a prayer for victory than as a mark of patriotic fervour. A boy of five said to me the other day at an open-air fête he was allowed to attend: "Why did they sing 'God Save the King'; I thought we only had that in church?"

The news published to-day that the Russians have broken the Austrian front for ninety miles does not come directly from Petrograd, but via Rome. It must, therefore, be received with a little caution, but there seems no reason to doubt the substance of the Russian success in Galicia. If the success is as great as is claimed, the entire Austrian army in the region affected must be in danger, and defeat may at any moment become a rout. If the Russian advance continues, Lemberg will once again be threatened, for it is now less than sixty miles away from the advancing armies of the Tsar.

The blockade against Greece is to be carried on here as well as in the Ægean, for all Greek vessels loading up in this country have been refused fuel and supplies. A similar action is to be taken at all British and French ports. A good many Greek ships here were loading for Allied and neutral ports. The stoppage of their trading facilities should have a marked effect on the situation, for protests to the Greek Government are certain to result from the owners, who will not be ready to lose business with freights standing as they do now.

The official statement issued from the The Hague by the Dutch General Headquarters that the Dutch Army is thoroughly prepared and equipped for any emergency is most significant. It is a warning to the belligerents that the Netherlands will allow no tampering with her neutrality, and it is probable that Germany is the belligerent most particularly warned. The Dutch Government all through the war has kept a watchful eye on Germany. Fearful of sharing the fate of Belgium, and having had nearly two years to prepare, the Dutch are now in a much better position to resist pressure by the Central Powers.

When changes are made in Government circles, as they must be during the next few days, it is understood that Mr. Tennant will not remain at the War Office. Everybody in the House of Commons will agree that he has earned promotion, for he has discharged his duties as Under-Secretary for War with marked ability from the first. One or two mistakes have been made, but these were possibly unavoidable, and, on the whole, there is nothing but praise for Mr. Tennant.

According to "Wayfarer" in the Nation, the idea of a Liberal daily paper specially devoted to the policy and personality of Mr. Lloyd George has been abandoned, if it was ever seriously entertained.

Old potatoes brought a record price today at Ormskirk, where £9 a ton was freely offered, this being an advance of fifty shillings a ton compared with the prices of last week. Holders of stocks were reluctant to sell. The shortage of potatoes is due to the cold weather and the lack of shipping to bring supplies of new potatoes from Jersey.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

YPRES AND OUR ALLIES.

The recent attack upon the Ypres salient, says The Times, indicates that the Germans are not so pre-occupied with Verdun that they are unable to give trouble elsewhere. Their thrust at Ypres was a big and serious affair, and if the villages behind the German lines are crammed with their wounded, our own losses have not been light, as Canada has painful reason to know. The motives for this sudden menace against Ypres remains a little obscure. The most common theory is that it was meant to anticipate a British offensive, and was intended to keep us engrossed in the area which the enemy are pleased to consider as unusually vulnerable. In other quarters there is a disposition to connect it in some subtle way with the naval movements in the North Sea. Whatever the object may have been, we may be certain that it has not so far had the slightest effect upon the purpose of the British Commander. Our co-ordination with the French remains unaltered. The most complete unity exists between the Allied forces.

LORD KITCHENER'S SUCCESSOR.

Speculation, says The Times, is still busy with the name of Lord Kitchener's successor at the War Office, but so far as it has found expression it is following conventional—they may almost be called pre-war—lines. It is clear that a large number of members in both Houses of Parliament will not be satisfied with a Party promotion of the ordinary peace-time type. These members point to the great position which Lord Kitchener held in the Alliance, and would resent an obvious anti-climax. Moreover, they hold that it was one of the sources of Lord Kitchener's strength that he was not a party man, and regard this fact as a strong argument for choosing his successor outside the party ranks. Outside Parliament this feeling is clearly stronger still.

THE LOST HAMPSHIRE.

The Special Correspondent of The Times at Aberdeen telegraphs:—The trawlers and steamships arriving here from the neighbourhood of the Orkneys report some details of the shipwreck which caused the death of Lord Kitchener. After a journey by train to the extreme North of Scotland, Lord Kitchener and his Staff embarked in H.M.S. Hampshire, which was awaiting them. They steamed away about seven o'clock on Monday night, taking a westerly course to round the northern island on the way to a Russian port. A stiff gale was blowing from the north-north-west towards the rocky, formidable, and desolate coast. The disaster occurred between Marwick Head and the Brough of Birsay, north of the Bay of Skail, on the western coast of the mainland of the Orkney Islands, on the opposite side to them from Kirkwall. At 8.35 or 8.45 a vessel on patrol reported that a warship was on fire in her vicinity. I hear that the ship appeared to blow up. No sound of explosion was heard, but this does not prove anything, inasmuch as sound could not travel far in the teeth of the storm which was raging. Within twenty minutes after the fire was sighted the Hampshire went down. Some seventy or eighty bodies were found by the cliff. They were taken to Stromness, and afterwards buried with full honours in the cemetery.

GERMAN FOOD PROSPECTS.

In a lecture at Leipzig, says The Times, Professor Rubner, the Director of the Berlin Physiological Institute, said that reduced meat rations would be necessary until about October or November, and he estimated the average daily "shortage" of meat in large towns at 150 grammes. The most important substitutes would be vegetables, and they must also supply the towns with skimmed milk. He considered that the bread supply was still the most important matter, and he thought that the authorities ought not to be "too systematic" in their methods. He declares that it is still quite possible for Germany to hold out, however long the war may last.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

The Stock Exchange, says The Times, was again strong yesterday, and the number of bargains recorded rose from 3,170 to 3,330. The principal features were a further advance in the War Loan, Consols, the principal Home Railway Stocks, and in Foreign Bonds, particularly French and Russian. Courtaulds Shares developed fresh activity, and the price rose ¼. Royal Dutch Shares were also prominently firm.

THE IRISH PROBLEM.

MEETING OF DUBLIN UNIONISTS.

Last evening a specially convened meeting of the Executive Council of the City of Dublin Unionist Association was held at the offices, 6 Leinster street, for the purpose of considering the present extremely critical situation in this country. There was a large attendance, including—

Lady Arnott, Mrs. Craig Davidson, Mrs. E. A. Holmes, Sir Gabriel Stokes, K.C.S.I.; Sir Robert Gardner, J.P., Mr. H. D. Conner, K.C.; Mr. Wm. Ireland, J.P.; Mr. W. M. Jellett, K.C.; Mr. A. W. Samuels, K.C.; Mr. W. Hewat, Mr. T. S. F. Battersby, K.C.; Mr. W. J. Dollar, J.P.; Mr. James Inglis, J.P.; Mr. Thomas Gerrard, Major J. A. Vincent, Mr. W. M. Hatte, Mr. F. H. Wayland, J.P.; Mr. T. H. R. Craig, Mr. D. W. Carpmills, Mr. E. J. Wells, M.P.S.I., Mr. John J. Perolze, Mr. W. S. Pace, Barrister-at-Law; Mr. J. J. Grey, Mr. E. J. Edwards, Mr. L. A. Holmes, Mr. J. Scott Byrne, Mr. John A. C. Ruthven, Mr. A. Burnett, Mr. W. J. Cotter, T.C., Mr. Cornelius De Groot, and Mr. T. H. Richardson, with Mr. W. Hamilton Kenny, General Secretary.

In the unavoidable absence of the Chairman and Vice-Chairman, Mr. Wm. Ireland, J.P., Deputy Vice-Chairman, presided.

Mr. H. D. Conner, K.C., proposed the following resolution:—

"The Executive Council of the City of Dublin Unionist Association consider that the present endeavour of the Government to impose a separate Parliament upon the Provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught is a distinct breach of the compact that nothing further should be done in reference to the granting of Home Rule until after the termination of the war, and that the present time, just after the suppression of rebellion, is most inopportune for making changes in the government of this country, which will at once be regarded as the reward of insurrection and disloyalty. The Council desire to record their opinion that the recent disastrous events are wholly due to the scandalous neglect of the Executive in carrying out the primary duties of government, and that no information is forthcoming to indicate any reason to suppose that the proposed measures will tend either to the safety of the Empire or the welfare of this country."

Mr. W. J. Dollar, J.P., seconded the resolution, which was spoken to by Mr. Jellett, K.C.; Sir Robert Gardner, Mr. Samuels, K.C.; Mr. Battersby, K.C.; and Mr. Perolze, and adopted unanimously.

POSITION OF SOUTHERN UNIONISTS.

WOMEN'S PETITION.

The Petition organised by the Dublin Women's Unionist Club for the safeguarding by the Imperial Parliament of the liberties of the minority in the three Southern Provinces was extensively signed yesterday at the offices of the Club, 10 Leinster street, Dublin, and at the Central Unionist Club, 36 Upper George's street, Kingstown.

FOKKER BROUGHT DOWN.

Mr. G. J. Stevens, special correspondent of the Press Association and Daily Telegraph, telegraphed from Salonika on Thursday:—

An aeroplane fight took place to-day in the Karasuli-Ghevgheli region, and a Fokker machine was seen to come to earth within the Bulgarian lines.

Mr. Lloyd George was busy at the Ministry of Munitions yesterday, and attended a meeting of the War Council at 11.30.

RUSSIANS CROSS THE STRYPA.

PRISONERS NOW NUMBER 64,714.

CAVALRY IN ACTION.

GERMAN FORCES ARRIVE FROM THE NORTH.

The Russian offensive continues with unabated success. They have now crossed the Strypa, and the pursuit of the enemy proceeds. The total prisoners captured now number 64,714.

From the official report it appears that German troops have come to the aid of the Austrians, who appear to have become totally disorganised.

An enormous quantity of booty has been taken, including guns of various calibre, and 30 balloons.

Yesterday's Petrograd communiqué:—

Western Front—The battle in Volhynia and Galicia continues, the Germans endeavouring to arrest the development of our offensive on the pierced front. The arrival of German forces from the north of the Polessie region has been reported. Among the prisoners taken are many Germans.

In spite of the obstinate resistance of the enemy at some points our offensive continues on the whole front from Pripet to the Rumanian frontier. In many sectors our cavalry got opportunities of charging the enemy.

The following incidents in the fighting may be mentioned:—(1) Near Sussk, to the east of Lutzk, a squadron of Cossacks attacked the enemy behind his fortified lines, capturing two guns, eight ammunition waggons, and two hundred boxes of ammunition. (2) Near Boriatino, south-east of Lutzk, our scouts captured two 10 centimetre guns, with four officers and 160 men. A 10 centimetre gun and 35 ammunition waggons fell into our hands near Dobriatine, on Ikva, below Mlynoff. In one of the sectors, among other booty we captured 30 balloons and tanks of asphyxiating gas.

The youngest of our troops vied with the seasoned regiments in deeds of valour. Thus some regiments formed of the Territorial element, by an impetuous attack, drove back the enemy on the Styr, and pressing close on his heels forced the bridgehead near Rojistche, at the same time taking about 2,500 German and Austrian prisoners, as well as machine guns and much other booty.

We crossed the Strypa, and some of our troops reached the River Plota Potok. While directing battle in one of the sectors of our offensive General Mikouline was seriously wounded.

The number of prisoners captured by us continually increases. Exclusive of those already reported, namely 958 officers and more than 51,000 Austrian and German soldiers, we took in the course of yesterday's fighting 185 officers and 13,714 men, making totals so far registered in the present operations 1,143 officers and 64,714 men. On Wednesday evening the enemy's artillery violently bombarded the region north-east of Krevo and south of Smorgon. The bombardment soon extended further north, and on Thursday night the enemy took the offensive with considerable forces, but all his attempts to approach our trenches were repulsed. In the neighbourhood of Molodetchno station an enemy aeroplane dropped four bombs. Five German aeroplanes carried out a raid on the small town of Logichine, north of Pinsk, dropping about 50 bombs. One machine was brought down by our artillery fire, and fell in the German lines.

Caucasus front.—In the Trebizond region our scouts dislodged the Turks from a convent south of the village of Hartokop. In the direction of Giumienekahn our troops made a dash into the enemy's position and took some prisoners, also capturing a trench mortar, arms, war material, tents, and camp equipment. We repulsed an enemy counter-attack by our fire.

AUSTRIAN REPORT.

Yesterday's Vienna communiqué:—

Russian Theatre of War.—Fighting on the north-eastern front yesterday was less severe. Near Kolki, north of Novo Alexiniec, north-west of Tarnopol, and on the Dniester the Russian attacks were repulsed with heavy enemy losses.

On the Bessarabian front all was quiet.

HOW A WHOLE AUSTRIAN DIVISION SURRENDERED.

(PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.)

PETROGRAD, FRIDAY.

The statements of wounded Austrian officers captured by the Russians confirm the general impression of the total unexpectedness of the Russian attack. Officers say that on the eve of the offensive the German victory in the North Sea battle was celebrated with champagne and brandy. The opening of the Russian bombardment brought about a sudden end to the festivities. Reports from other sources state how a party of Russians seized, by a surprise attack, an Austrian railway station with all its staff. A quarter of an hour later an Austrian military train arrived at the station with troops and supplies. The entire trainload was captured. The railway telegraphist had just completed his message concerning the despatch of shells. In the course of the next hour a train conveying shells fell into Russian hands. In one part of the front practically a whole Austrian division, including two Generals, surrendered. The only resister was a Hungarian Sister of Mercy, who fired on the Russians with a Browning pistol, and was disarmed with difficulty.

FIGHTING ON ITALIAN FRONT.

HECATOMBS OF ENEMY DEAD.

Yesterday's Rome communiqué:—

In the Adige Valley zone there were artillery duels. Our artillery caused fires and explosions in the munition dépôts at Anghebene (Vala Arsa). Along the Posina Astico front masses of the enemy last evening formed a junction between Sant Ubaldo and Vibo Astico, and began an attack in the direction of Monte Giove and Monte Brazome. They were promptly dispersed by the accurate fire of our artillery. On the Sette Comuni Plateau fighting continues with extreme violence.

On Wednesday evening the struggle around our positions to the east of Campomulo continued to rage desperately until 11 o'clock at night. Our infantry made hecatombs among their assailants. In front of one company alone 203 enemy bodies were counted. In the course of yesterday the enemy, having received enormous fresh reinforcements, and after intense bombardment with numerous batteries, renewed his attacks in the zone east of Asiago and Campomulo. Our Alpine troops and infantry repeatedly repulsed the enemy's columns, and courageously counter-attacked with the bayonet. At the end of the day our troops, in order to avoid the effects of the enemy's incessant artillery fire, fell back to new positions about a hundred metres to the east of their former positions.

In Sugana Valley there were artillery actions. Successful attacks on our part are reported in the Podestagno zone (Upper Boite), and on the Rienz and Pera. In Carnia and on the Isonzo there was artillery activity and an exchange of bombs.

AUSTRIAN REPORT.

The Vienna communiqué reports:—

Italian Theatre of War.—On the Asiayo Plateau our troops captured Monte Sisenol, north of Monte Meletta, and Monte St. Elgomberto, which were strongly defended by Alpini. Our heavy mortars opened fire against Monte Lisser. The number of prisoners has increased by 28 officers and 550 men, and our booty by five machine-guns.

Our naval airmen dropped numerous bombs on the railway enclosures at Porroerugro, Atisana, and Azuolo, on the inner harbour of Grado, and on an enemy aerodrome. Our army airmen bombed the railway station of Schio Piovene.

Mr. F. A. Jones, Legal Adviser of the English Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, has been appointed to act also as solicitor to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues.

WESTERN FIELD OF WAR.

FIGHTING AT VERDUN.

ENEMY USE LIQUID FIRE.

Fighting in the Verdun region continues with great violence. The enemy succeeded near Cailette Wood in penetrating French trenches.

According to the evening French communiqué, the enemy made several attacks during the day against Hill 304, accompanied by liquid fire, all of which completely failed.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Yesterday afternoon's Paris communiqué:—

On the left bank of the Meuse we repulsed during the night two small German attacks against our positions south-west of Hill 304.

On the right bank the Germans continued to deliver violent attacks on a front of about two kilometres east and west of the Thiaumont Farm. Between the farm and the Caillette Wood the enemy penetrated into one of our trenches.

All attempts made to the westward were stopped with heavy losses to the enemy.

In the St. Mihiel region the enemy, who was attempting to approach our lines west of Bislee, was dispersed by our rifle fire.

Last night's communiqué:—

On the left bank of the Meuse the Germans made several attacks in the course of the day against our positions of Hill 304. Two attacks to the west of this hill, and two others to the south-west, accompanied by jets of liquid fire, were a complete failure, thanks to our curtain and machine gun fire.

On the right bank the bombardment was very violent throughout the region to the south of the Thiaumont Farm, the Chapetre Wood, and Fumin, and the sector south of Damloup. No infantry attack was made during the day.

In the Vosges a strong enemy reconnaissance was dispersed by our rifle fire at the Hartmannsweillerkopf.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

Yesterday's Berlin communiqué:—

Our artillery set fire to a munition dépôt near Lihons, south-west of Peronne. We bombarded enemy camp troops and transports at the railway station of Suippes.

In Champagne and on the west bank of the Meuse our artillery secured visibly good results against French batteries, as well as against French infantry and motor lorry columns.

On the right bank of the Meuse fighting progresses favourably for us. Enemy counter-attacks, undertaken with strong forces, at the farm of Thiaumont and between Chapitre Wood and Fort Vaux, collapsed without exception with heavy enemy losses.

In the Vosges, east of St. Die, we succeeded by mine explosions in destroying a large portion of French trenches.

UNITED STATES PRESIDENCY.

REPUBLICANS AND MR. ROOSEVELT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

CHICAGO, THURSDAY.

The Progressive party has appointed a Committee to confer with a Committee of Republican delegates in the interests of harmony, should a candidate representative of the two parties be appointed.

The Republicans to-day adopted their provisional platform. A committee was appointed to confer with the Progressive Committee on the question of harmony. Both the Republican and Progressive Conventions then adjourned until to-morrow morning.

FRIDAY.

It is announced that Senator Fall, of Mexico, will nominate Mr. Roosevelt as Republican candidate in the regular Republican Covention this afternoon.

The Republican Conference Committee has reported to the Convention that the Progressive conferers are unanimous in urging the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt as the most desirable candidate, who would secure union. The Republican conferers have made no recommendation to the Convention, but the name of Mr. Roosevelt evoked applause lasting three minutes, mainly confined to the galleries. The Progressive Conference Committee reported in similar terms, except that it indicated that a further conference might be desirable this afternoon or during the evening.

The Republican Convention, after deciding not to dissolve the Conference Committee, this afternoon began to receive formal nominations for the Presidency. Mr. Whitman, Governor of New York, presented the nomination of Judge Hughes, of the Supreme Court, in an eloquent address.

While the Republicans were nominating their delegates, Mr. Borah suddenly appeared at the Progressive Convention, which received him with applause. He said that he had come to get inspiration, and he extolled Mr. Roosevelt as the one man whom millions of citizens wanted to be nominated. The action of Mr. Borah is not surprising, as he has long been known as a Progressive Republican, and has even been mentioned as a possible compromise candidate. He, however, prevented any demonstration in his own honour by his praise of Mr. Roosevelt as a man who had done more than any other "to make the issues of this campaign."

Mr. Whitman denounced the present Government's Foreign Policy, declaring that the prosperity of the United States was only temporary, and was dependent wholly upon the war. For the times to come, he said, the nation calls for our greatest statesman, and the Republican party. He quoted an eight-year-old address by Judge Hughes, to prove that the "silent candidate" really favours adequate provision for our defence, and the maintenance of the efficiency of the army and navy. (Applause.) The reference to the Administration of President Taft brought more applause, this time lasting six minutes. When he finally proposed the nomination of Judge Hughes, there was a demonstration lasting twenty minutes. The delegates thronged the aisles, and marched round the hall, shouting "We want Hughes."

Finally, order was restored, and Mr. Nicholas Murray Butler took the platform to offer the name of Mr. Root.

ALLIED WAR COUNCIL.

M. BRIAND AND GENERAL JOFFRE RECEIVED BY THE KING.

An Allied War Council was held at 10 Downing street, London, yesterday. The Conference opened at 11.30, when most of the British representatives, including the Prime Minister, Mr. Balfour, Sir Edward Grey, and Earl Curzon, together with several high military officers were present. Mr. Lloyd George, who spent Thursday night at Walton, did not reach the Ministry of Munitions till nearly noon, and was a little late in joining the Conference. The deliberations lasted till about 1.30, and had not then concluded.

The members of the staff of the French Premier, General Joffre, and their colleagues, left for the French Embassy for luncheon; while their respective chiefs and some of the British Ministers, including Mr. Balfour, remained to luncheon with Mr. Asquith.

Later M. Briand, General Joffre, and other Ministers drove to Buckingham Palace, arriving there shortly before three o'clock. They were most cordially received by the King.

On their return to Downing street, the Confernce was resumed at 3.15, and continued till nearly seven o'clock. It is likely to be resumed to-day.

When the French Premier and General Joffre left Downing street they were enthusiastically cheered. Mr. Lloyd George also had a warm reception on leaving.

Sir Edward Grey remained with the Prime Minister for some time after the joint Conference adjourned.

An important conference to consider the question of the postponement of the Fair holidays on the Clyde has been convened by the employers for Monday next at Glasgow. In addition to the employers the delegates of twenty-six trade unions whose members are in the engineering and shipbuilding industries have been invited.

THE LATE LORD KITCHENER.

MR. ASQUITH REPLIES TO MESSAGES.

The Prime Minister has received a large number of messages of condolence on the death of Lord Kitchener. Replying to a telegram from the Portuguese Minister of War, Mr. Asquith says—Lord Kitchener's death in the service of the Allied cause will but serve to strengthen the determination of the whole British Empire to bring that cause to a triumphant issue.

Thanking General Alexieff for his sympathy, Mr. Asquith replied—This heavy blow will but strengthen the determination of the people of the British Empire to endure all sacrifices necessary to secure the complete victory of our common cause. Fate was specially cruel in depriving Lord Kitchener of the opportunity of witnessing the present triumphs of the heroic Russian Army, upon which I beg Your Excellency to accept the congratulations of the British Government.

To Baron De Broqueville, Belgian Minister of State, the Prime Minister declared—The sympathy of the Belgian people, in defence of whose just rights we entered this war, will strengthen us in our determination to carry it through to the end.

Acknowledging the condolences of the President of the Serbian Council of Ministers, Corfu, Mr. Asquith said—Lord Kitchener died, as since the outbreak of the war he had lived, in promoting the common ends of the Allies, and our grief will but strengthen our determination to shrink from no sacrifice in the common cause.

BELFAST CORPORATION AND LORD KITCHENER.

At a meeting of the Belfast Corporation in Committee yesterday, a resolution of regret at the death of Earl Kitchener was adopted. The resolution stated that the Secretary of State for War, whose loyal and brilliant achievements in almost every part of the Empire, but always where the greatest difficulties were to be surmounted and the most intricate problems to be solved, added much lustre to the British Crown, and since the outbreak of the present war in August, 1914, until his untimely death by the sinking of H.M.S. Hampshire, he had the whole-hearted confidence of the nation. The motion was passed in silence. The city flag has been flying at half-mast since the news of the death of Earl Kitchener reached the city.

ENGAGEMENT OFF THE BELGIAN COAST.

ENEMY DESTROYERS DRIVEN INTO PORT.

The Secretary of the Admiralty announces:

On Thursday morning a British patrol force, composed of monitors and torpedo boat destroyers, was engaged off Zeebrugge with the enemy's torpedo boat destroyers, which, on being fired at by the monitors, returned into port. On our side there were no casualties, and no damage was sustained by any of our ships.

GERMAN REPORT.

A statement issued in Berlin yesterday says:—On Thursday morning, off the Flanders coast, an artillery fight took place at long range between German outpost boats and enemy monitors and destroyers. Several of our gun salvos were observed to have good effect. The enemy then withdrew in the direction of Dunkirk. German forces suffered no damage whatever. This (Friday) afternoon a French battle hydroplane was shot down by one of our seaplanes. The occupants were picked up and taken into harbour by one of our submarines, which was in the neighbourhood.

PREPAREDNESS OF HOLLAND.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

AMSTERDAM, FRIDAY.

The Dutch General Headquarters has issued a long communiqué, stating that the Dutch Army is thoroughly prepared and equipped for any possible war. Answering the question whether the Dutch Army is adequately prepared for the event of war, and whether the materiel and equipment of the troops fulfils modern requirements, the communiqué states that, though it is inadvisable to make public information which might benefit a possible future enemy, there is no objection to furnishing data which will convince the Dutch soldiers that they can face the prospect of war with confidence. In August, 1914, continues the communiqué, the materiel and equipment left much to be desired. The workshops of the Kingdom were not ready for mass production. These workshops have been enlarged, and a great number of private factories have also been equipped for production of war material. Although as regards raw materials great difficulties were experienced, the factories of belligerent countries being mostly not in a position to make deliveries, while neutral countries generally prohibited exports, the supply of ammunition for rifles and guns has increased in important measure, and the capacity of the State and private factories guarantees adequate replenishment. There is a great supply of hand grenades, in the use of which the troops have been trained. Gas masks, steel helmets, modern engineering material, trench shields, barbed wire, and protective material have been made in large quantities. The manufacture of explosive materials has been largely extended. The personnel have been trained in removing even electrically charged wire barricades. Searchlights for coast defence, land positions, and field troops have been increased. Private industry co-operated in the building of new aeroplanes, although Holland as regards aeroplane motors remains dependent on foreign countries. The increase of artillery has offered the greatest difficulties. Nevertheless, the supply of guns has considerably increased, as well as that of machine guns, while their manufacture still continues. The manufacture of rifles has also reached a very high figure.

CAMPANIA IN NORTH SEA FIGHT.

Supporting a proposal of the Liverpool Council yesterday to send a congratulatory message to Sir John Jellicoe and Sir David Beatty, Sir William Forwood says that however they might view the recent naval battle, it was a distinctly magnificent victory for the British Fleet. Sir William said he would like to give one incident of the fight, of interest to Liverpool people. One ship engaged in the battle was the old Cunard liner Campania, now refitted, and acting as a seaplane ship. H.M.S. Warrior was hard pressed with a German ironclad on either side pouring shells into her. She was unable to move, and a few minutes would have been sufficient to send her to the bottom, but the old Campania went ahead between the German ship, threw a hawser on board the Warrior, and towed her for ten hours, when she sank. The Campania was thus the means of saving the crew of the Warrior.

DUBLIN SEA SCOUT LOST.

Henry Cooper Mills, 1st Port of Dublin Sea Scouts, lost his life on H.M.S. Indefatigable in the recent naval battle. Henry Mills was well known to most city Scouts as an active member of the Sea Scouts at Ringsend, in whose interest he had worked until the outbreak of war. The night before he left to join his ship, then only a mere lad of 16, he attended at the forecastle, and bade a cordial farewell to his fellow Scouts, who in return bade him God-speed. All Dublin Sea Scouts will join in offering their deep felt sorrow and sympathy to his bereaved parents in their great loss. He was entered on the 1st Port of Dublin Sea Scouts as: No. 18, date 1/6/'13. Henry Cooper Mills, Sea Scout. Joined H.M. Navy. Volunteered European war.

In our notice in Thursday's issue of the death of Sub-Lieutenant Henry Stuart King, R.N., eldest son of Mr. Frank A. S. King, Local Government Inspector, Cliftonville, Bray, killed in action in the Indefatigable, it should have been stated that he was educated at Monkstown Park School. Early in January, 1916, he was promoted to Acting Sub-Lieutenant, and by special request of his captain he was re-appointed on promotion to H.M.S. Indefatigable. In March, 1916, he was selected to represent the officers of H.M.S. Indefatigable on an eight days' visit to the Irish Guards in the trenches near Ypres.

GREEK SITUATION.

PORTION OF THE ARMY DEMOBILISED.

EFFECTS OF THE BLOCKADE.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

ATHENS, FRIDAY.

In the Chamber to-day M. Skouloudis stated that the King had signed a Decree submitted to him by the Government for the demobilisation of the 1892 to 1903 classes. M. istence. Since yesterday maritime circles in the on the Government's own initiative.

ATHENS, THURSDAY.

Despite the absence of official communication on the subject it is believed here that the blockade is directed exclusively against the Greek Merchant Navy, which is the country's most important source of wealth in existence. Since yesterday maritime circles in Piræus are most uneasy. Shipowners are at their wits' end at the sudden blow they have received. The Bourse is closed. The general public has not yet realised the far-reaching effects of the blockade. There is great activity in official circles, repeated Ministerial conferences being held, and the Prime Minister constantly being received by the King.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

PARIS, FRIDAY.

With reference to the attitude of the Allies towards Greece, The Temps points out that the restrictive measures taken are justified by the Treaties of 1827 and 1863, and by the necessity of making it clear in Athens that the Greek Government is also bound by those treaties. The Temps adds that the amount of pressure to be brought to bear upon Greece will depend upon the readiness or otherwise of the Greek Government to understand that neutrality does not merely consist in playing the game of the enemies of the protecting Powers of Greece.

Mr. G. W. Stevens, the special correspondent of the Press Association and Daily Telegraph, writes from Salonika, dated Thursday:—The steps taken by the Allies were authoritatively described here to-day as a restriction of commerce. Details of these measures and their objects, however, still remain unexplained.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

IRISH EDUCATIONAL DEFECTS.

REFERENCES TO REBELLION.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

BELFAST, FRIDAY.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church resumed its deliberations to-day in the Church House, Belfast—Rev. Dr. West, Moderator, presiding.

Rev. John Humphreys moved the adoption of the report upon Intermediate education.

Rev. J. J. Macaulay (Rathgar), in seconding, said the violent outbreak of sheer lawlessness in Dublin in Easter week had been again and again referred to as a "schoolmasters' rebellion," and he had not the slightest doubt that it was a terrible indictment of their national system of education. (Hear, hear.) One of the leading physicians in Dublin, Dr. Peacocke, a son of the late Archbishop Peacocke, speaking at a meeting a few days ago, said that when he was on duty in one of the hospitals during the rising boys were taken in who boasted about the number of policemen and soldiers they had shot and wounded. That was largely the melancholy result of a bad system of education, a system which turned out boys and young fellows with a sort of cowboy temper. Continuing, the speaker said the whole of the educational system of the country needed to be lifted to a higher plane.

Rev. Dr. Osborne (Dublin) suggested that the question of the text books used in the schools and the kind of history that was verbally taught should be examined by one of the Committees of the Assembly. The Christian Brothers' schools were not under the control of the Board of Education, but they were receiving large sums of money from the State, and he submitted the State had a right to ask what they were doing with that money. Dr. Osborne then quoted a number of extracts from books in use in Christian Brothers' schools, and moved that the Intermediate Education Committee should be instructed to examine the text books in use in Irish Intermediate schools, and report to the Assembly next year.

Rev. J. C. Johnston (Dublin) said during the rebellion several drafts of prisoners were taken past his house on their way to trial, and the ominous thing about them was that about one-third were boys. These youths, he submitted, were the victims of the educational system to which they had been subjected. Surely hatred of England and sedition of the deepest dye must have been infused into the youths referred to in their education, otherwise they could not have had such a result.

Dr. Osborne's resolution was accepted by the mover of the adoption of the report, and the report was then passed.

PRIMARY EDUCATION.

Rev. Dr. Bingham, in moving the adoption of the report on primary education, said that he had always held that inspectors should be men that had a practical experience of education. Referring to the amalgamation of small schools, Dr. Bingham said it must be remembered that in a country like Ireland many small schools were an absolute necessity. He considered it a public scandal that there should be between two and three thousand young assistant mistresses in the employment of the National Board on salaries ranging from £24 to £28 a year. That was an intolerable state of things, and it ought to be remedied speedily.

Rev. W. K. M'Larnon, in seconding the motion, said they had in their primary schools a body of men and women, whose industry, perseverance, and general efficiency were beyond all praise. Yet from the report it would seem that the average salary of the 6,000 assistant teachers employed in the schools was under £70 a year. He advocated total abolition of Irish history teaching.

The report was adopted.

The Moderator, in declaring it carried, expressed his satisfaction at the references which had been made to the necessity of increasing the teachers' salaries.

Rev. Dr. Osborne moved the adoption of the report on the religious instruction of students in Marlborough street Training College, Dublin.

Rev. Dr. Davidson seconded the motion, which was passed.

DRINK PROHIBITION.

Rev. William Martin proposed the following motion:—

That the members of the Assembly, representing 562 congregations, hereby pledge themselves that from this date henceforth they will give no support and record no vote in favour of any candidate for office in Church or State who is connected with the traffic in strong drink, or who refuses to pledge himself, in writing, to support the cause of prohibition as often as opportunity offers.

Rev. Dr. Irwin, of Killead, seconded the motion.

Rev. Dr. Irwin, of Windsor, speaking as a life-long abstainer, said he refused to vote for the motion.

Rev. Dr. Park moved as an amendment, that while the Assembly did not consider it necessary to take the action indicated, it, in the most emphatic manner, expressed its views on the question of prohibition, and desired also to impress on its people that, in selecting and voting for candidates for Parliament and for other important positions, the question of the prohibition of the drink traffic for the period of the war should be kept prominently in view, so as to secure without delay that the object they aimed at might be accomplished.

This amendment was carried by 180 votes to 165.

Mr. Hogg then moved an amendment, that the members of the Assembly pledge themselves that, during the period of the war and for six months afterwards, they would give no support, and record no vote in favour of any candidate for office in Church, Municipality, or State who is connected with the traffic in strong drink, and who, if called upon, refused to pledge himself in writing to support the cause of prohibition as often as opportunity offered.

Mr. J. McElderry seconded.

The amendment was carried by 165 votes to 162. The second amendment became the substantive motion, and was carried by 170 votes to 147.

THE LOSS OF THE HAMPSHIRE.

A Service was held yesterday at Brompton Parish Church in memory of the officers and men of the Hampshire, which sank off the Orkney Isles with Lord Kitchener and his Staff on board. The members of the congregation were principally relatives of the sailors who perished, and all were in deep mourning.

OBITUARY.

THE EARL OF MEXBOROUGH.

News has been received at Methley Park, near Leeds, that the Earl of Mexborough died at Florence on Wednesday, in his 73rd year. Lord Mexborough, who was the fifth Earl, leaves no direct heir, the title passing to his half-brother, the Hon. John Henry Savile, of Arden Hall, near Helmsley. He was thrice married, the last time as recently as January of this year. The late Earl was a Buddhist, his conversion to that faith causing some sensation at the time. Before becoming a Buddhist Lord Mexborough was a Roman Catholic.

The Bread and Flour Association of Liverpool intimate that there will be an increase of one ounce in weight on the fourpenny loaf from Monday next.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

NATIONALISTS AND EXCLUSION.

Having pointed out that extremists on either side are doing their utmost to prevent a settlement of the Irish question, the Daily Chronicle tenders friendly counsel to Irish Nationalists. It asks them to remember that a Parliament in Dublin would, from the first moment of its existence, begin to exercise a strong attractive influence on the excluded areas. There is not a county in Ulster that would not soon begin to feel the "pull" of the National Assembly. In spite of old racial and religious animosities, Ireland is an organic unity. In the nature of things a National Parliament will in process of time draw all Ireland to itself. There would be no need to constrain the excluded areas. They would, if left alone to the free play of forces, come in of their own accord. Meanwhile, the Irish Parliament would be on its best behaviour, determined to justify itself, and consoled by the temporary exclusion of part of Ulster, by necessary and not illiberal financial compensation and adjustment. With this prospect before them, we hope the Nationalists will not allow their dislike to partition to stand in the way of an Irish Government being set up in Ireland with the least possible delay. There are no risks to be run. The advantages are obvious. The future is assured. Why hesitate, inquires the Chronicle? We are afraid that the conciliatory spirit in Ireland has been impaired by the rigorous régime of martial law. It would be a calamity if the blunders of soldiers were allowed to destroy the opportunities of statesmen. Let Ireland look beyond the present evils, and grasp the skirts of a happy chance born of sorrow and tragedy. If she does so her future will be happier and more serene than any past epoch in her tragic history.

AN IRISH "SETTLEMENT."

In a leading article discussing an Irish "settlement," the Morning Post declares that if Mr. Lloyd George wants to settle the Irish question he must negotiate not with Mr. Redmond, or even with Mr. Dillon or Mr. Devlin, but with the Sinn Feiners. Is he negotiating with the Sinn Feiners? If he is not he is leaving the popular party out of account. If he is, he is negotiating with rebels. The Sinn Feiners of Cork organised a public procession to celebrate the "defeat" of the British Navy. These are the people to whom the government of three-quarters of Ireland is going to be handed over. They are to be given limited powers, and they are expected to keep within these limitations. Such is the settlement which is going to end the Irish question. Was there ever such a settlement? We remember one such—when Sheridan was faced with a bundle of bills he gave his creditors a promissory note for the amount, and said: "Thank God, that's settled."

AMERICAN SINN FEINERS.

Reporting the Republican Convention at Chicago, the Washington Correspondent of the Morning Post says—Sinn Feiners tried to induce the Convention to incorporate into the platform a plank pledging the Government, "in the interest of a lasting peace," at the Peace Conference to "advocate the establishment of an Irish Republic, guaranteed by the solemn agreement of all the world Powers." The proposal was rejected without discussion or a moment's hesitation. Despite the efforts made by the Germans and their allies, the Irish, or rather the Sinn Feiners—for the great mass of Irish-Americans are not in sympathy with them—have been given no encouragement, and every attempt to put into the platform an offensive reference to England or to make trouble has been routed.

DUBLIN PLASTERERS' STRIKE.

CAPTAIN DOWNIE'S AWARD.

At the unanimous request of the Dublin Building Trades Employers' Association and the Dublin Operative Plasterers' Trade Society, who have had a dispute with regard to wages since 1st April last, Captain F. Downie was chosen to act as sole arbitrator to settle the matter. The men returned to work on 22nd May, pending the result of Captain Downie's award. Statements were placed before Captain Downie by both sides on the 8th inst. at the offices of the Dublin Building Trades Employers' Association, Commercial Buildings, Dublin. Captain Downie, in his award, states that the present rate of wages paid by the members of the Dublin Building Trades Employers' Association to the members of the Dublin Operative Plasterers' Trade Society, viz., 9d. per hour (50 hours per week) should be increased by three-farthings per hour, making the wages 9¾d. per hour. And that, in addition, a further sum of ¼d. per hour should be paid as an extra allowance during the continuance of the present war. The wages will thus be at the rate of 10d. per hour until the next pay day after the date on which Articles of Peace are signed by His Majesty's Government, after which said date the wages shall be at the rate of 9¾d. per hour. In the computation of wages on overtime regard shall not be had to the last above-named extra war allowance of ¼d. per hour, but overtime shall be computed only at the rate of 9¾d. per hour. Wages shall be increased and allowance paid as per the above arrangement as from the 22nd May, 1916. Both sides expressed themselves satisfied with Captain Downie's award.

The Irish Times has received the following further subscriptions to the Lord Mayor of Dublin's Fund in relief of persons left unemployed through the recent fires in Dublin:—

"Sutton"	£1	5	0
"J. D."	1	0	0

In the Prize Court, London, yesterday, Sir Samuel Evans condemned as being conditional contraband destined for the German Government large quantities, amounting to many millions of pounds in weight, of linseed cake, gluten feed, homing feed, cotton seed, meal, and cocoanut cakes, shipped from America to Scandinavian ports on four neutral vessels. The President said the evidence did not impress upon the Court that the dealings bore the stamp of bona fide commercial transactions between neutral sellers and neutral buyers.

EAST AFRICAN CAMPAIGN.

GENERAL SMUTS'S ADVANCE.

The Press Association's Special Correspondent, telegraphing from German East Africa on June 8th, says:—Union Day has seen the accomplishment of another task. The Paree Mountains are now clear of the enemy. We now lie below the Usumbara Mountains, and the lights of Wilhelmstal are clearly visible. The celerity of our movements, despite the density of the jungle, has again disconcerted the enemy, who left undestroyed a stout pile bridge over the Pangani. On May 29th he endeavoured to check our advance by shelling our transport at long range with a naval gun. There were only two casualties, although sixty shells were fired. Our advance suffered no check, and on May 30th the Belfield Scouts and the 2nd Rhodesians smartly attacked the enemy's prepared positions, which commanded the bridge. After offering some resistance, the enemy retired, and as they did so were successfully picked up by the mountain guns accompanying a force sent by us to make a flank movement, with the object of detaching the enemy from the foothills of the southermost part of the Paree chain. The attempt to hold the neck of the bottle formed by the Pangani closing in on the Paree Mountains failed entirely, despite the favourable nature of the terrain. On May 31st many bodies of Askaris were found in the bush, the density of which, however, prevented an accurate estimate of the enemy's losses. The captured camp revealed interesting devices to conceal it from aeroplane observation. There were no tents, but grass huts of irregular outline scattered under the trees. The health of our troops on the march is good, and the condition of the animals is fair, while the motor transport has proved a success. The Indian regiments, the King's African Rifles, and the whole force have shown a fine and cheery endurance und difficulties.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS IN IRELAND.

The annual election of the President, Vice-President, and Council was held yesterday, and the following were elected for the ensuing year:—

President—William Taylor; Vice-President—John B. Story; Secretary of the College—Sir Charles A. Cameron; Council—William Stoker, Sir Charles A. Cameron, Sir Lambert H. Ormsby, Richard D. Purefoy, Henry Gregg Sherlock, Sir Thomas Myles, D. Edgar Flinn, Sir Arthur Chance, Shepherd M'C. Boyd, Sir Robert H. Woods, R. Bolton McCausland, Thomas E. Gordon, Edward H. Taylor, F. Conway Dwyer, Alexander J. M'A. Blayney, R. Charles B. Maunsell, Trevor N. Smith, William Ireland Wheeler, Sir C. Arthur Ball.

The following resolution was adopted:—"That we, the President, Vice-President, and members of the Council, on behalf of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland, humbly beg to express to His Gracious Majesty King George V. and to His Majesty's Government their profound regret at the great loss which the Empire has sustained by the death of Field-Marshal Earl Kitchener, K.G., K.P., O.M."

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

In the long roll of Presidents of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland many names stand out of those who, not only in their day were great surgeons, but for all time must be taken into account in the history of Medicine. William Dease, Abraham Colles, Richard Carmichael, Philip Crampton, Robert Adams, and Arthur Jacob are names that are familiar to the student of medical history in every country in the world, and these names represent merely a few of those who have left their mark on the progress of surgery. Mr. William Taylor, the new President, has a long association with the Royal College of Surgeons, in the Schools of which he studied, and from which, in 1893, after a distinguished career as a student, he received his first qualification as Licentiate. In 1898 he was elected a Fellow of the College, and in 1903 graduated in Arts and Medicine in the University of Dublin. Mr. Taylor is surgeon to the Meath Hospital and County Dublin Infirmary, and visiting surgeon to the Cork street Fever Hospital. For the past two years he has been Vice-President of his College. Mr. Taylor, who has been elected to the highest position within the gift of the Surgeons in Ireland, will add lustre to the office that has been entrusted to his care.

BIRTHDAY HONOURS.

Lieutenant-Colonel F. E. Metcalfe, temporarily commanding the 7th Battalion of the Lincolnshire Regiment, who has received the D.S.O., is the only son of Mr. Francis Metcalfe, of Metcalfe Park, Enfield, Co. Kildare. He joined the New Army in September, 1914, and is serving abroad.

Major H. A. S. Prior, 9th Yorkshire Regiment, youngest son of Mr. Charles B. Prior, J.P., Crossogue House, Co. Tipperary, has been awarded the D.S.O.

Lieutenant Edmund Rait Kerr, Royal Engineers, who has received the Military Cross, is the youngest son of Mr. Sylvester Rait Kerr, of Rathmoyle, Edenderry, King's County. He is abroad with the 2nd Field Company R.E.

ANNUAL DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT'S ADDRESS.

The Right Hon. Sir Horace Plunkett presided yesterday over the annual distribution of prizes to the students of St. Columba's College, Rathfarnham, Co. Dublin. Though the weather was not of the best, a fairly large number took advantage of the Warden's invitation to attend the welcome ceremony of St. Columba's Day. Among those who accepted his invitation were the following:—

Major-General Sandbach, Sir Stanley Cochrane, Bart.; Mr. F. W. Pennefather, the Rev. Canon Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Davies, Miss Rice and Mr. H. J. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Grubb, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Croly, Canon and Mrs. Weir, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Dobbs, Mr. Ramadge, Professor Alton and Mrs. Alton, Mrs. and Master Healy, Mr. and Mrs. Hartman, Mr. and Miss Robinson, Professor and Mrs. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Levington, Mr. Blandford, Miss Irvine, Mr. and Mrs. Guilford, Mrs. Ed. Hardy and Miss Hardy, the Misses Arundel, Mrs. and Miss Smythe, Mr. and Mrs. FitzHerbert, the Misses Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Fenton, Miss Symes, Rev. J. L. Robson, Mrs. Gilmore, Canon and Mrs. Somerville, Mr. H. P. Goodbody, Dr. and Mrs. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, the Rev. W. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Henry, Miss Newell and Miss H. Newell, the Misses Chapman, Rev. Harvey and Mrs. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Symes, Mrs. Vanston, Mrs. Harte, Mr. and Mrs. Swain, Mrs. Warham, Mr. and Miss Ledlie, Mr. J. C. Dewhurst, Mr. W. R. Dobbs, Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Crampton, the Misses Falkiner, Mrs. Deverell, Miss Keane, Mr. and Mrs. Falkiner, Mr. and Mrs. M. Goodbody, Mr. and Mrs. Dowse, Mr. and Mrs. Ganly, Mr. and Mrs. Telford, Miss Vize.

Before the distribution of prizes there was a short Service in the College Chapel.

THE WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

The Warden (Rev. William Blackburn, M.A.), addressing the guests and masters and students, assembled for the ceremony in the College Hall, expressed their appreciation of the kindness of Sir Horace Plunkett in presiding over that gathering. They had secured for the event, he said, one who, in matters of public and national welfare, was not only one of the most distinguished, but also one of the busiest men in Ireland. (Applause.) All knew the valuable important work that he was engaged upon, even at that time; and, indeed, any enterprise that concerned Ireland's welfare was certain at an early stage to call him to its aid, that keen energy and extraordinary capacity for taking a wise and impartial view of national problems that so marked their distinguished chairman. They felt, therefore, all the more deeply the honour and kindness done to them by Sir Horace in attending their simple gathering. To two other of their guests the Warden also extended a special welcome. First to Major-General Sandbach, who was not only known to all there, the high and responsible post that he held at that time in connection with the unsettled state of Ireland, but to Columbians especially for the invaluable work he had done for the School in the winter of 1912, when he had delivered to the boys that stirring address, from which had sprung a few weeks later the College Officers' Training Corps. Since then General Sandbach had nursed the Corps by a kindly and practical interest, including the gift of a handsome challenge cup for shooting. (Applause.) No less pleased were they to see there that most popular of old Columbians, as well as a distinguished Fellow of the College, Sir Stanley Cochrane, who was home on sick leave. Sir Stanley had been one of the first taking back to Ireland a first-hand experience of that critical and dangerous retreat of the Franco-British force from the Serbian border to Salonika. (Applause.) On the other hand, the Warden regretted the absence of so many of the Fellows of the college, mainly because of duties connected with the war, and in particular the absence of their Visitor, the Lord Primate, who wrote to express his own regret at not being able to be present, and wished all a happy and prosperous day. (Applause).

The Warden then gave his annual report of the college. They could thankfully acknowledge the remarkable outward prosperity of the school. In January their numbers had reached 91. The increase in numbers had entailed corresponding alterations and improvements to ensure that the conveniences and comforts of the place should keep abreast of the increased numbers. Perhaps in no particular had the war affected the public schools of Great Britain and Ireland more than in scholastic successes. The great Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Dublin were hardly recognisable as Universities in these days. They were vast military encampments where academical honours were being rarely sought or conferred. The schools were, of course, responsible for this. None but those who were debarred by health or other cogent reasons now thought of a University course. Woolwich and Sandhurst monopolised the average boy's vision of the future. For this reason the college had no University honours to record. Five boys had passed into Woolwich since the war had begun, and many more, of course, into Sandhurst. In the previous twelve months three had passed into the Indian Army, one of whom O'Connor, had taken second place in the examination for the whole of the United Kingdom. (Applause.) On the other hand, the means to renew again successfully the training of boys for the Universities directly the war was over had not been neglected.

THE EDUCATION OF THE FUTURE.

He thanked God that the war had not found our great public schools wanting in the production of the suitable raw material for the country's need. To what extent it might have been better from the technical point of view was another question. The public clamour for a Head Master of Eton with a science degree rather than an arts degree was significant of the growing desire for a change in education. Without doubt they should have to give a better scientific training to their boys than they had done in the past. He was himself very far from agreeing with those who urged the entire abandonment of the study of dead languages. Modern languages would have to be taught on more rational lines. With nine nations fighting in the Allied ranks the openings in the future for those who had a knowledge of one or more of those languages must be great. Personally he would like to see Russian taught in that college. He only waited for a demand from parents to put the scheme into practice.

THE ROLL OF HONOUR.

Before closing the Warden read to the gathering the Roll of Honour as it stood at the time, summarising the numbers on active service and the distinctions won. While the best of those who had fallen in battle was read out the audience stood as a tribute of honour and respect to the college's gallant sons:—Serving since the beginning of the war were 289; killed or died of wounds, 27; missing, 1; wounded, 24; mentioned in despatches, 23; awarded C.M.G., 3; awarded D.S.O., 7; awarded Military Cross, 6; awarded D.C.M., 2. In addition to those, one had been appointed by the Tsar to be a Companion of the Order of St. Vladimir; one an Officer of the Legion of Honour by the French President, and one a Commander of the Order of the Crown by the King of the Belgians.

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT.

Having distributed the prizes, the Chairman said:—The address of the Warden was ingeniously contrived to leave nothing for other speakers to say, and he has made it difficult for me to speak as I should like about him by the kind things he has said about me. I think I may, however, congratulate parents and pupils alike in this audience for having in that address had an opportunity of judging the heart and mind of a distinguished Head Master. I felt as I listened to him that, at a very critical time in the history of this country, we had the right man to give to Ireland in beautiful and healthful surroundings near its capital city a public school eminently fitted to train boys in Ireland to play a worthy part in the life of their country. The College of St. Columba is, of course, a type of educational institution which is one of the distinctive contributions of England to western civilisation. I was myself educated in one of the oldest of them, in whose playing fields a great Irishman told us his historic victory was won. I was at Eton in the days when the typical English public school seemed to have little regard for the needs of modern life. I am quite sure that I learned something there that has made me a far better citizen than I might otherwise have been. It would I dare say, take an extremely clever examiner to discover what it was that I learned. (Laughter.) Of course, I would not claim in my own person to justify any educational system. But search the records of the British Empire, going no further back than the beginning of the present century—its statesmanship, diplomacy, and social service, its journalism, its missionary work, its colonisation—fields of effort which I think you will agree pretty well embrace its spacious and varied public life. Would there not be unanimous agreement among all impartial critics of public school education that these institutions have done more than their share in the moulding of that life? Scan the roll of honour—alas, as yet incomplete—in the greatest war in human history, to which this institution has made its full contribution, and is not the case for the public school, when subjected to the ultimate test, immensely strengthened? I heard of one case where, out of a cricket eleven of four years ago, eight had died for their country. And, if this be admitted, and you ask me, who have no claims to speak upon education, but am a mere observer of national affairs, to explain this, I would say simply that character counts so much more than intellect in the service of mankind that there must be something in the corporate life of a good public school which, in the making of character, supplements what is taught in books.

EXAMINATIONS.

These general observations may seem out of place in an address which accompanies a distribution of prizes when I might be expected to restrict myself to congratulations to the winners and condolence with the losers. I may say at once I have keen pleasure in handing the tokens of their work and worth to the young Irishmen who have scored these early successes. I wish them from my heart careers of ever higher achievement, and, while they must remember that success in examinations does not necessarily mean success in life, they may take legitimate pride in having won in the appointed race. To those who have not been successful I can speak with an understanding sympathy. (Laughter.) Half a century ago I attended many distributions of prizes, and, while I never had other than kindly feelings for the successful competitors, I confess I had a great contempt for the intelligence of my examiners, and was extremely doubtful as to whether examinations were really any test of merit. You know it is so easy to spoil your whole chances by a single little mistake. I remember, for instance, a paper in English composition where the boys were given an hour to write about Oliver Cromwell. The boy who wrote the best essay upon his life fell into the error of wishing to beautify its tail with a little tag of poetry which he recollected, as he thought, in connection with his subject, but, unhappily, it was another Cromwell. On his death bed he made the regicide exclaim: "If I had served my God with half the zeal I served my King." (Laughter.) The examiner did not read the rest of the quotation, but put the essay into the wastepaper basket. I was guilty myself once of a still worse mistake. It was at Eton, the first term after the new laboratory had just been opened. In an elementary physics paper a question was asked upon the expansion of metals—why it was that pendulum clocks had a tendency to go slower in summer than in winter, and had to be compensated. I knew the answer accurately, though I have forgotten the compensation part of it now, but I concluded my exposition with the confident assertion that this accounted for the greater length of day in summer than in winter. Those of my school-fellows who are still alive, and who remember the incident and the trouble it caused to me, may think that this discovery was the cause of my being elected a Fellow of the Royal Society. But I will tell you in strict confidence the truth about the matter. We had a sixpenny sweepstake among the boys who had no chance of getting a prize as to which would make the most idiotic answer. I swept the pool, and, as far as I can remember, that is the only prize I ever won at school. (Laughter.) I say these things to comfort the unsuccessful students, because, although, as you see, I was not a brilliant or successful scholar, I have found that, by working a good deal harder than I should, perhaps, have had to do if I had taken full advantage of my educational opportunities, and by trying to act through public life towards my fellow-citizens in the way you learn to behave towards your school-fellows in any public school which has the real public school spirit, I have managed to get along fairly well, and to take my part in my day and generation with other workers in Irish life, and to play, if not a distinguished, I hope a more or less useful part. So, now, what I wish to say to the winners in these school tests, whom I admire at a distance, and to the losers, with whom, as you see, I deeply sympathise, is that the real value you can get out of your life here is to learn how to make yourselves, what God meant you to be, good, patriotic Irishmen. I know this institution is Protestant, and that the part of Ireland from which most of its pupils come is predominantly Roman Catholic. Denominational education loses all its value if it does not see and teach the necessity for charity before there can be any religion worth having. I hope, when you boys take your part in the public life of your country that religious antagonisms will no longer interfere with the immensely complicated problems we shall all have to face immediately after this war.

FUTURE WORK FOR ALL.

Probably the chief lesson that will survive in the civil life of these islands after the war will come from the war-time work, which has brought into useful service literally hundreds of thousands of people who never had any useful work to do before. I believe myself, in the changes that are imminent, the changes that war has brought, and that peace will also bring, it will come about that there will be, as never before, useful work for everybody to do. We shall all have to work, and the education of the young must prepare them to develop their greatest usefulness. How this is to be done, what changes in the courses of schools and colleges are indicated by the rapidly-changing needs of modern life, is a subject for school teachers, and is beyond my ken. I am glad to learn from the Warden that he has been asked to represent this institution at the Headmasters' Conference, for I, personally, have entire confidence in his grasp of the needs of his pupils—a confidence which the growing numbers of the College show to be shared by Irish parents.

HOME EDUCATION.

One word more. You will remember the Warden's saying at the beginning of his address that we meet to-day rather as a family than a public institution. Before we go to school our family is our world. After we leave school, and go out into the world, we may either become absorbed in ourselves and our own careers, or we may get more and more interested in the welfare of the society around us. I believe in every man first of all doing as well as he can the work which comes to his hand. I also believe that, as life goes on, happiness depends on the extent to which you are conscious that you are working for others rather than for yourself. Between the life at home and the life in the world the educational institution which preserves the altruistic rather than the selfish spirit is the best, and, while I think it good for every man who is in a position to afford it to have part of his education abroad, I think it better that the foundations should be laid at home. From everything that I have seen and heard of this institution, I believe it is well calculated to make, what Ireland needs, more than ever before, large-hearted, large-minded, practical patriots. (Applause.)

After the distribution of prizes the guests had tea in the college. The catering was done by Harrison and Co., of Westmoreland street, Dublin.

CHURCH OF IRELAND.

A meeting of the Chapter of Christ Church Cathedral was held in the Chapter House yesterday, after Matins. The following were present:—The Very Rev. the Dean (in the chair), Rev. Precentor Hegan, B.D.; Ven. the Archdeacon of Dublin, D.D.; Canons Hayes, M.A.; F. W. Mervyn, M.A.; J. G. Day, M.A.; S. R. McGee, M.A.; H. B. Kennedy, B.D., and Rev. W. W. Dungan, M.A., Secretary.

ST. BARNABAS' CHURCH, NORTH WALL.

The jubilee of this church will be celebrated to-morrow. The preacher at Morning Prayer will be the Bishop of Meath, and at Evening Prayer the Archbishop of Dublin. St. Barnabas' Church was built fifty years ago under the Shannon Trust on a site granted by the late Mr. Charles Gaussen. In recent years the church has been handsomely decorated, and new chancel, tiling, organ, pulpit, east window, and Holy Table added. There are fine school buildings in the church grounds, and a new boys' school was built a few years ago. The church is situated in Upper Sheriff street.

S.P.G. ANNIVERSARY MEETINGS.

In our advertisement columns will be found the arrangements for the annual meetings of the S.P.G. The Incorporated Members' meeting will be immediately after the Celebration in Christ Church Cathedral. The Bishop of Tuam will preside, and the Rev. J. Tuckey, M.A., who for some time was Dean of the College at Saskatoon, will speak. The meeting is open to members. The annual meeting will be in St. Stephen's Parochial Hall, Northumberland road. The Archbishop of Dublin will take the chair. Revs. J. Tuckey and A. C. Judd, C.F., who has worked in Delhi and Shantung, will also speak.

THE DUBLIN FIRE AND PROPERTY LOSSES.

BASIS OF CLAIMS FOR COMPENSATION.

The Committee of the above Association attended at the Castle, and were received by the Home Secretary, on Monday, the 5th inst. The following members were present:—

Sir Thomas Robinson, Mr. J. C. Percy, Mr. W. R. Robertson, Sir Joseph Downes, Mr. William Bewley, Dr. J. A. Mitchell, Mr. Gerald Curtis, Mr. G. Stapleton, solicitor; Mr. Patrick Rooney, solicitor; Dr. Lorcan Sherlock, Mr. Patrick White, M.P.; Mr. J. F. Potter, and R. J. Kidney, Secretary.

The Committee was introduced by Mr. John E. Redmond, M.P., and the following members of Parliament were also present:—Messrs. J. J. Clancy, K.C.; William Field, P. J. Brady, J. D. Nugent, and Alderman Byrne.

In the absence of Mr. W. M. Murphy, J.P., Chairman, Sir Thomas Robinson briefly introduced the objects of the deputation, and Mr. Charles Eason read the following statement, on behalf of the Committee, which was supported by Dr. Lorcan Sherlock and Mr. P. White, M.P.:—

NOTES OF CLAIM FOR COMPENSATION.

(1) Sufficient funds to replace the buildings that have been destroyed or injured by fire. Adequate compensation, such as would put every person in the same position as he was before the disturbance, should be paid. This involves the payment of such a sum as would cover the cost of erecting buildings similar to those destroyed. We submit that the destruction of property was not due to any special act or omission on the part of the sufferers. That the destruction was the result of the military operations carried on not in the interest specially of the people of Dublin or of the people of Ireland, but in the interests of the whole of the United Kingdom. That it would be inequitable that the particular persons whose property was destroyed should have to bear any part of the loss thus brought about for national objects. That it would be inequitable to limit the compensation to the amount of the insurance policies, because these policies were not intended to provide for such events as have now taken place. The existing policies were taken out in view of ordinary circumstances, as for example—That the Fire Brigade would check a fire, and would have only one considerable fire to deal with at one time. That the sprinkler system, fire indicators, and fire appliances would operate to limit any outbreak. All these precautionary measures were rendered nugatory by the military operations. The Fire Brigade was, in fact, called out, but had to withdraw owing to danger from gun firing. That the cost of rebuilding is very much increased by the extensive area over which the fire extended; in ordinary times only one or two buildings would be burnt at one time. Now the large number of buildings destroyed creates an immense demand for building material and workmen, a demand which can only be met at a cost greatly above ordinary rates; such increases not being due merely to the state of war, but to a large extent to the sudden simultaneous demand at one particular place.

We submit, therefore, the sufferers whose buildings are, relative to present cost of building, under-insured cannot be held to have been negligent in not providing for such events as have destroyed their property. We submit that, even in the light of these events, it is not by insurance of individual properties that such losses should be guarded against. The only persons who can protect us from such losses are the Government, who control the military and police. We pay our taxes and police rates that such protection be afforded, and if the Executive fail the responsibility should fall upon the nation whom the Government represents.

Further, we claim such adequate compensation because of the magnitude of the losses which would otherwise fall upon innocent persons. It is certain that to restrict compensation to the actual amount of insurance policies would result in financial disaster to many traders—the sums thus available for rebuilding would be quite inadequate for the purpose, and many traders would probably become insolvent and their leases terminated, and they would be thrown penniless upon the world. We submit that the nation at large should readily agree to grant a liberal sum to avert such a calamity from their fellow-countrymen.

(2.) To replace the stock-in-trade, furniture, fixtures, machinery, plant, fittings, and effects destroyed or injured by fire. All these items are at present at much increased prices, and the same considerations apply to them as to buildings.

(3.) Rents and standing charges, such as interest on loans, which will have to be paid while business is suspended during reinstatement of buildings. In a few cases these have been provided for by the policies for loss of profits, which the Government have undertaken to pay, but in most cases this is not so. In ordinary circumstances temporary premises would be found with comparative ease, but in this case the extent of the destruction is such that the difficulty of getting temporary accommodation is enormously enhanced. We therefore submit that considerable assistance should also be afforded under this head.

(4.) Loss of profits during the period until the business is fully restored. There are a few cases in which this will be met by the Government because of insurance policies having been effected, but we strongly urge the absolute necessity of granting assistance in this respect to avert the misery and distress which otherwise will result from the traders being deprived for some time of their means of livelihood. The claim may seem somewhat indefinite, but any excessive claim might be guarded against by reference to the income tax returns, which would afford a maximum limit to any claims.

(5.) Damage to buildings, furniture, fittings, etc., due to gunfire, water, or causes other than conflagration.

(6.) The value of goods looted or damaged by water, or other causes than conflagration. We understand are practically granted. We assume that claimants will have to give satisfactory evidence of the extent of their losses.

(7.) Loss of book debts, owing to the burning of account books. This is a very serious item of loss in some cases. Owing to the great severity of the fires, safes and strong rooms have failed to protect their contents, and the account books have been completely destroyed. This is a loss which would probably not have occurred in an ordinary fire, and we submit that some consideration should be given to sufferers from this cause. We agree that substantial evidence may rightly be insisted upon to support such claims, but in principle we submit that the claim is an equitable one.

Procedure.—We desire to refer to the use that might be made of the existing policies. We suggest that these should be taken as a starting-point for investigation of claims. The insurance companies might be invited to examine the claims so far as they are covered by existing policies, and might report to the Committee as to the amount by which the claims exceed the total sum insured. We believed that by this means claims in a great many cases could be rapidly investigated, and advances might be made in some proportion of the total amount insured or claimed.

Promptitude of Settlement.—Whatever method of investigation of claims is adopted, we strongly urge that steps should be taken to advance sums promptly to the claimants who are unable to take steps to resume business till provided with some funds.

Mr. Patrick Rooney, solicitor, also brought under the notice of the Home Secretary the claims of the solicitors' profession.

TERMS OF REFERENCE.

The following amended terms of reference, suggested by the Association, were submitted to the Home Secretary by the Committee:—

In connection with the destruction—both in Dublin and elsewhere—of buildings and their contents, the State will assume the same liability as would have fallen on the insurance companies if the losses had been fully covered by policies in force at the time of the recent disturbances. Accordingly, they suggest the Government appoint a Committee—

(a) (i.) to ascertain what were the sums covered, for the ordinary fire risks, by insurance policies in force at the time of the destruction of the property; (ii.) to advise what part of such sums would normally have been paid by the insurance companies, if the destruction had been caused by accidental fire, and report the amount underinsured.

(b) Having regard to the information obtained under the foregoing heads (i.) and (ii.), to advise how, on analogy, the several claims of uninsured and underinsured persons could fairly be dealt with.

For the foregoing purposes looting may be deemed to be burning; all direct and consequential damages of any kind to be taken into account. In no case will any grant be made in respect of the property of persons in complicity with the outbreak.

Mr. Samuel replied, and stated that he could not give a definite answer until he had consulted with the Prime Minister.

The Committee have asked the Home Secretary for a verbatim report of the meeting, and as soon as it is received, the reply will be published.

Mr. John E. Redmond, M.P., in thanking the Home Secretary for his sympathetic reply, urged upon him the necessity for an immediate and generous settlement.

CLAIMS FOR MALICIOUS INJURIES IN DUBLIN.

At the opening of the Recorder's Sessions in Green street Courthouse yesterday,

Mr. Burke (Assistant Law Agent to the Corporation) mentioned with reference to claims for malicious injuries lodged for hearing by his lordship that the claimants were not anxious to have their claims disposed of at the present sessions. He accordingly suggested that all the cases should stand adjourned.

The Recorder stated that he could not entertain the application for adjournment. The cases would be duly listed, and when the first claim was called for hearing he would hear whatever application might be made with regard to proceeding with the cases or adjourning them.

VEGETABLE PRODUCTS COMMITTEE (IRISH BRANCH),

5 Molesworth street, Dublin.

The Hon. Secretaries appeal for funds to carry on the work of supplying fresh fruit and vegetables to our Sailors of the Grand Fleet, and to Irish Naval Bases. Cheques should be made payable to Mr. D. L. Ramsay, Hon. Treasurer, and all particulars as to gifts of produce will be gladly furnished by the Hon. Secretaries.

THE MOTOR TRANSPORT VOLUNTEERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—This Corps was formed February, 1916, at the instigation of the Hon. President, Sir John Lister Kaye, and Mr. C. R. Freemantle and Mr. D. E. Newgas, the two executive officers, in connection with His Majesty's Forces returning from the front on leave. The District and Underground Railways cease running at midnight, therefore on the men arriving after that hour there was no alternative but to march the troops across London to various stations to catch their trains home, which often resulted in their falling victims to the dangers and pitfalls of the streets. To obviate this the Motor Transport Volunteers was formed, and received official sanction from the G.O.C. London District, Major-General Sir Francis Lloyd, on 15th February, 1916, and began their work for the men of H.M. troops the same night, and up to May 30th over 20,000 men have been conveyed from Victoria to the railway stations in the N.S.E. and W. of London between midnight and 5.30 a.m. free of all charge. In the same manner the men are conveyed from the N.S.E. and W. Stations to whichever station in London may be their point of departure back to the front.

The expenses entailed by hiring numbers of motor 'buses for service after midnight causes an average expenditure of from £100 to £200 per week, the entire expenses having been borne by the members of the Finance Committee and the two executive officers and personal friends, but owing to the almost national importance of this work an appeal for further funds to continue is now issued to the public. There are no administration expenses, so that every penny subscribed can go for the direct benefit of H.M. troops. All contributions will be gratefully received if sent to Mr. J. C. Merrells, hon. treasurer, 11 and 12 Silver street, London, E.C., to be made payable to the Motor Transport Volunteers, crossed London City and Midland Bank. The following is the list of patrons of the Corps:—Field-Marshal Viscount French, O.M., G.C.B., K.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.; Duke of Beaufort, Duke of Newcastle, Duke of Portland, Duke of Somerset, Hon. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

AN IRISH SETTLEMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR—It must have occurred to the many brilliant men who have attempted to solve the Irish problem to divide up the objections of the two opposing parties, and try, by tackling these objections separately, to reduce one by one the difficulties to be overcome. Among the objections which the Unionists have to Home Rule is the dread they have that it would mean Rome Rule, and if it could be clearly shown that a Parliament in Dublin would mean nothing of the sort one of the obstacles to a settlement would be done away with. In the first place, the less well-informed Unionist firmly believes, and is encouraged by his leaders to believe, that his religion would be interfered with under a Home Rule Government; and, secondly, the more broad-minded among them imagine that, even if religious intolerance was not exercised, all Government posts and County and Urban Councils' posts would be packed by Roman Catholics, and in that way the broader aspect of Rome Rule would prevail in Ireland. Surely it ought not to be difficult to dispel these ideas altogether? Is it not possible definitely to eliminate from the functions of an Irish Parliament any possible interference with religions of any sort? If this was done would not the second objection to supposed Rome Rule gradually fade away?

Given an Irish Parliament, is it to be imagined for one moment that the political parties in Ireland, as they exist at present, would continue to do so? The argument has been used that because County and Urban Councils have had large Nationalist majorities ever since the Local Government Act came into force the same sort of thing would happen in the greater sphere controlled by an Irish Parliament. But why should this be so? In the past the Nationalists have, very naturally, never allowed an opportunity to pass without rubbing it in that Home Rule was the first and foremost consideration, and that elections of all sorts must bear the political stamp. But, when their object is achieved, what necessity would there be for such tactics? Once the fear of Rome Rule is banished from the mind of the Ulsterman does it not seem probable that all Irishmen would unite to rehabilitate their country on the lines of the Colonies of the British Empire? The great war now raging has shown that the cry for absolute separation from England was only a part of the game for keeping alive the demand for Home Rule, and, except in the case of the extremists, this desire did not exist in reality. In all great controversies the leaders on both sides are bound, in order to arouse the necessary enthusiasm, to exaggerate their respective doctrines; and though we have heard a great deal on one side of intense loyalty to England, and on the other of "Ireland a nation," this will all evaporate into thin air when once a real solution has been found for the Irish problem.—Yours, etc.,

THE RELEASE OF JAMES LARKIN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In the report in to-day's Irish Times of the proceedings of the Commission of Inquiry into the recent revolt, Sir James Dougherty in his evidence seems definitely to lay the responsibility of Larkin's release on the shoulders of Lord Aberdeen. This has hitherto been generally accepted by the public, but I have been positively assured by one who was in a position to know the facts at the time that the then Lord Lieutenant knew nothing about it until the release had been ordered by Mr. Birrell and acted upon by the prison authorities. Lord Wimborne's evidence is strongly in support of this. He stated that the Lord Lieutenant had been stripped of his prerogative in these matters, even to the extent of not informing him of the action that had been taken, and and that he had to insist at least that minutes should be sent to him of the business conducted in his name and without his previous knowledge. As the release of Larkin commanded so much public attention, caused such terrible trouble and loss to the City of Dublin, and to a considerable extent affected the recent rebellion, the time has surely come that the circumstances regarding it should be made known, and the responsibility of this most ill-advised and mischievous action should be placed on the right shoulders.—Yours, etc., "DAYLIGHT."

RATHMINES Y.M.C.A.

WORK FOR SOLDIERS.

The annual meeting of the Rathmines Y.M.C.A. was held last evening in St. Matthias' Parochial Hall, Adelaide road, Dublin.

Captain R. W. Thompson, D.L., who presided, said that the Association were glad to be able to carry on work for soldiers. It was through their faithfulness and courage that they had been delivered from worse troubles than had already come. They had to thank God for deliverance through their soldiers, and were glad to be able to thank them in some little measure by catering for their moments of ease. In all their dealings with soldiers the Association put God in the first place. On Wednesday week, in the name of the Association, a new hut would be opened at the Curragh, not only for soldiers, but for officers, who would be able to enjoy the spiritual as well as material benefits of the Association. General Friend and other distinguished officers would be there.

Mr. J. N. Tisdall, hon. treasurer, presented a financial statement, showing a deficit of £20.

Mr. E. C. Buckley, hon. secretary, presented the thirty-sixth annual report, which stated that the Association had to adapt itself to the pressing and immediate work among soldiers. Consequently the Committee were compelled to suspend some of the ordinary fixtures, and open the large hall as a soldiers' recreation room. Seventeen members had enlisted for the duration of the war. The ladies' auxiliary supplied soldiers with tea and cake nightly through the year, free of charge, and a sale of work held in December produced £20 for the tea fund. Mrs. Duckett had made a further donation of £200 in reduction of the debt on the building. During the rebellion soldiers, mostly of the Sherwood Foresters, came into the Club to the number of two or three hundred a night, and were given tea. They showed the warmest appreciation of this hospitality. The Royal Irish Rifles, whom the Association had known for a year, had done their duty courageously and well, and brought peace and quiet to the district at a difficult time.

Rev. William Baillie, Rector of St. Matthias', in moving the adoption of the report, said it seemed that the Y.M.C.A. had entered into its inheritance through the war. For a great many years the Association was not the force it ought to be in the country. The reason was that it was not previously a self-sacrificing Association; it was living too much for itself, sheltering Christian men, keeping them under Christian influence. That was all very well, but Christian men should not be living in hot-houses of Christian environment. They should go forth to spread the light of the Gospel, and instead of being an Association living in their reading rooms, recreation rooms, and clubs, should be in the nature of a lifeboat crew trying to find those sinking lower and lower, and drifting further and further from the ways of righteousness, that many of them had brought from country homes to city life. The Association had now entered into an inheritance of Christian manliness. When they thought what the soldiers had done for the country and that city they felt that they could not do enough for them. The speaker concluded with a tribute to the good work of Mr. Buckley (hon. secretary) and Mrs. Buckley.

Rev. J. C. Irwin, who seconded the motion, remarked that the Association now had the opportunity of the age, and were doing a work that justified them in the sight of men and God.

The report was adopted.

Dr. D. Turner and Mr. C. G. Warner also spoke.

PLATFORM AND STAGE.

The Gaiety Theatre announces a continuous programme, from 3 to 10 daily, of official war pictures as the attraction for next week. The series includes Lord Kitchener's visit to the French Army, "Letters from Home," the work of the Army Veterinary Corps at the front, the fight at St. Eloi, etc.

Mr. Seymour Hicks, with Miss Mary Robson and his company, will visit the Theatre Royal next week, when he will appear twice nightly in "Broadway Jones," a play in which he has scored a great success. "Broadway Jones" has created great amusement wherever it has been produced. It has been as popular in America as in these countries, and there is every reason to believe that its visit next week will be welcomed.

Mr. J. Leicester Jackson and Mr. Charles Mepham's company will appear at the Queen's Theatre next week in the new Irish play, "Her Little Bit of Heaven," by Blanche and Leicester Jackson. The piece is in five scenes, and will be played twice nightly. There will be matinée performances on Whit-Monday and Saturday. Miss Blanche St. Albans will take the part of "Norah Maniey."

The title of the musical comedy revue at the Empire Theatre next week is "Come in, Miss." It is written and arranged by E. Telford Terris. The cast appears to be a strong one. The revue is in three scenes. In addition, there are the five Wilbours, in their quick-fire singing and dancing act, and the Dugardes in an act introducing "The child with the wonderful voice."

At the Tivoli Theatre next week the principal engagement is that of The O'Mahonys, in Irish songs and melodies. Also there are Seth Howes, Vera Rejane, Barnes and Lea, the Ryewodes Trio, the Coenens, Jack Audley, and the Campbell and Baisden comedy duo.

The British Empire Shakespeare Society (Dublin Branch) announces a meeting in the Little Theatre on Thursday next, 15th inst., at which a paper will be read by Mr. J. D. A. Johnson, LL.D., on "England in the Time of Shakespeare." The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock by Professor W. F. Trench, D.Litt. After the lecture tea will be served in the Green Room, followed by a programme of Shakespeare songs and recitals.

A holiday programme has been arranged for next week at the Rotunda, including a sensational film play in four acts—"Forbes, the Fighting Man." Nothing like this extraordinary drama has been seen in Dublin. The principal parts are taken by two of Italy's leading artists—Miss Helen Makowska, as the "High Priest's Daughter," and M. Carlo Gallian as "Jack Forbes," the boxing hero. "The Girl of Lost Island" (second episode) will also be screened. Then for the last three days of the week a four-reel drama, "Diana, the Charmer," will head the list. The story is one of particular interest at the present moment, dealing as it does with the work of the Secret Service, and the acting of Francesca Bertini, who takes the leading rôle, is certainly one of the best and most finished pieces of work on the screen to-day. The second last episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" will also be shown.

The attraction at the Bohemian Picture Theatre next week will be "Peggy Hyland," in an adaptation of Augusta Evans Wilson's novel, "Infelice." The management, still adding to their musical resources, have now secured the permanent services of Signor Simonetti, the well-known violinist, in addition to those of Mr. Clyde Twelvetrees ('cello). Signor Simonetti was a personal friend of Sivori, the only pupil of Paganini. He played the violin under Gounod, and was the first to play the obligato to that composer's "Ave Maria" for Patti and Tamborlick, and possesses an autograph letter and a signed photograph of Gounod. Of his violin playing and his graceful compositions it is unnecessary to remind the public. From Monday next the Bohemian Theatre will pay the amusements tax for its patrons.

SOBER RUSSIA.

Professor J. Y. Simpson, of Edinburgh, is well-known as an authority on certain phases of Russian life, and in this volume he has given us some very up-to-date studies of quite unusual interest. The reader will naturally turn first to the chapters on the prohibition of vodka—that greatest of all State experiments in the regulation of private customs and morals; but there are other chapters whose interest is hardly inferior. We may instance those descriptive of the surprising development of the self-consciousness of the Russian peoples, the flowing tide of patriotic feeling, and the swift political evolution that is scrapping the old machinery of government. Again, the chapters on "The Future of Poland," on "Religion in Russia to-day," on "Russia and Constantinople" will prove of real value to the growing company of students of things Russian. It is the vodka question which, in view of our own urgent national problem, will probably excite the widest interest. Vodka is a spirit which contains 40 per cent. of alcohol. It was the national drink of Russia till the ukase of the Tsar abolished the sale of it. Beer and wine are used in comparatively small quantities. The prohibition of vodka, it is not too much to say, has revolutionised Russian life, especially in the villages. Adopted at first as a measure to facilitate mobilisation, in which it proved of signal advantage, it was afterwards extended for the period of the war. Now it appears as if it might become permanent in Russia. All classes have been impressed by the beneficial results of the decree. "Every aspect of our village life has been changed," said the leader of one of the parties in the Duma to Mr. Simpson. "Latterly the old men did not come to the village assemblies because they were continually submitted to insult by the half-drunken younger men. . . . The women are enthusiastic; no longer are they insulted or beaten. They receive their husbands' wages now. The chief of police in a district in the Government of Moscow said to a friend of mine the other day, 'The conditions of my service will have to be altered; I have had nothing to do for two months.'" The improvement in the moral tone of the community has been marked. The suicide rate has dropped. Hooliganism has almost disappeared.

Again, "the evidence of large employers of labour is uniformly favourable to the good results of prohibition. One Petrograd factory-owner, employing 4,000 hands, said that the efficiency of his men had noticeably increased from 10 to 15 per cent." The rise in the monthly deposits in the savings banks has been remarkable. Crime during the first three months of the war decreased in all Russia by 25 per cent. One of Professor Simpson's chapters deals with the results of an investigation set on foot by various Provincial Zemstvos to ascertain the results of the great experiment after a year of prohibition. The author quotes many of the replies given to the questionnaire which was sent out. They are almost wholly favourable to prohibition, and in their cumulative effect they are impressive. Many correspondents note the return to their villages at the end of the winter's work of men who used to stay in the towns to drink: "many came back from Petrograd who had been away for several years without word of any kind; they came back quite respectable, bringing with them money." In the case of factory workers there has been a decrease in non-appearances of 36.8 per cent. Numerous statistics and testimonies relating to industry and prohibition are given, and all are in favour of the new conditions. What the future action of the Government will be in regard to prohibition is uncertain. Permanent prohibition is generally regarded as bound up with the promises of the Emperor. This would certainly be in accord with the desire of the majority of the nation. As for beer and wine, the sale of which is permitted in some municipalities—as, for example, Odessa and Kharkov—the question of prohibition is still very open. The amount of capital sunk in Russian breweries is small, and the trade could be easily bought out, but as yet national opinion has not arrived at a decision. There is a dread lest beer-drinking, if permitted to increase, may replace vodka as a menace to the social and industrial life of the nation.

It has often been said that one cannot make a people sober by Act of Parliament. The Russian experiment, so far as it has gone, gives the lie to that catchword. Again, many people question whether sumptuary laws regulating purely individual modes of life, and paternal methods of government, do not constitute a dangerous invasion of the rights of the individual. Certainly the British temperament leans towards individual freedom rather than communistic restraint. It will be found, however, that the line of truth and of practical wisdom is somewhere between the two ideals of human life. So far as it has gone, prohibition in Russia has been justified by its fruits.

"The Self-Discovery of Russia." By J. Y. Simpson. London: Constable and Co. 6/- net.

THE IRISH QUESTION.

"Unificus" fully describes his pamphlet in the sub-title—"A Plea for Settlement by Conference." Towards the end he suggests some lines of possible agreement which might be tried by an Irish conference, but the essential part of his pamphlet is that in which he re-states the arguments for an attempt to reach a settlement of the Irish question by agreement through a purely Irish conference, and emphasises the factors in the present situation which, in his view, clear the way for such a conference. His main points are these:—Since the war began a conference was impossible until a few weeks ago; now it is not merely possible but almost necessary. No purely party policy will settle our difficulties, and the lines of compromise hitherto suggested by English statesmen are open to the gravest objection, and will in effect leave the whole controversy open, to be fought over again at a later date. The one remaining course of action is the Irish, or All-Ireland, policy. We have the examples of the South African Conference of 1906, the Irish Recess Committee, and the Irish Land Convention. The ideal is a free, informal gathering of the wisest and most trusted men in the country, chosen partly as representatives of various points of view, but mainly as being patriotic and honest men. The politicians would naturally form the nucleus, but delegates of the Parliamentary parties should number less than half of the total membership. The deliberations should be unhurried, extending over quite six months. If the conference could issue a definite agreed scheme for an Amending Bill, it would receive the backing both of the people of Ireland and of the British Parliament.

"Ireland's Opportunity: A Plea for Settlement by Conference." By "Unificus," Scholar of Trinity College, Dublin. With an introduction by W. F. Trench, Litt.D., Professor of English Literature in Trinity College, Dublin. London: P. S. King and Son. 6d.

THE KAISER AND THE WAR.

This work by Baron Beyens, late Belgian Minister at the Court of Berlin, occupies, we should say, a unique place among the numerous books relating to the war. During the "melancholy leisure" forced upon him by the calamities of Belgium the author has written his book as an effort to trace the causes which led up to the outbreak of war, and to assign the responsibility for the disastrous events which have followed. His conclusions are based upon the personal observations made during his official stay of two years in Berlin immediately before the outbreak. It is obvious that the author's position gave him exceptional opportunities of studying the characters of Germany's leading men. Few, however, could have used these to better advantage than Baron Beyens, whose penetrating analyses and brilliant psychological sketches of the principal German actors in the tragedy of 1914 make fascinating reading.

When war was declared many in these countries were ready to believe that the German Emperor was in reality a man of peace, and that affairs had been "rushed" by the Crown Prince and his party during the Kaiser's tour in Norwegian waters. Baron Beyens is convinced that this theory is utterly false. The Emperor was perfectly cognisant of all that happened, and was directly responsible for the war. A definite decision was reached either at Kiel or later during the Norwegian cruise, which the author regards as having been undertaken merely to throw dust in the eyes of the Great Powers. Prince Lichnowsky's account of the Irish troubles and the language of the Germanophile organs of the English Press evidently deceived the Emperor into the belief that England would be incapable of entering upon a European war. Had he not felt so certain on this point, would he have exposed the thriving trade of Germany and her unfinished fleet, the very apple of his eye, to the terrible ordeal of a naval war with England? Would he have been ready to endanger the economic prosperity of the Empire—a prosperity in which the mercantile marine was an indispensable factor? The British Blue Book relates how savagely the entry of England was resented and the unpardonable behaviour towards our Ambassador. Regarding Italian affairs the Emperor was no better informed, though Italy, as a unit of the Triple Alliance, might have been more easily read. "Feelers" were thrown out to discover how Belgium would behave in the event of war with France, and every effort was made to impress upon the author the invincible might of Germany. During one conversation the Emperor stated that he knew that the Franco-Russian Alliance was unstable.

Some curious light is thrown upon the Prussian character. The author relates how, shortly before the war, any French visitor was received with marked brusqueness by the Kaiser, and elsewhere we learn that Ministers Plenipotentiary were treated like dirt. The arrogant Hun deemed it not worth while to discuss questions of European importance with the Ministers of small nations, though no difference is made in other countries between Ministers and Ambassadors. As to the military outlook, the remarks by Von Moltke in May, 1913, will suffice to give some idea of that total absence of moral sense which has characterised the Prussian conduct of war: "We must throw overboard all the stock commonplaces about the responsibility of the aggressor. As soon as there is a ten to one chance in favour of war we must forestall our opponent, commence hostilities without more ado, and mercilessly crush all resistance."

"The week of tragedy" will be read by everyone with deep interest. A better or truer idea of the march of events has not been presented. The character sketches of the Emperor, the Crown Prince, the Chancellor, and other great officers of State are admirable. The book is in no way more remarkable than in its astonishing restraint. Despite every provocation, the author has never once permitted himself to deliver a hasty or embittered judgment. The indictment has not lost anything, but is rather intensified, by such fair-mindedness and balance.

SOME ENGLISH PRIMATES.

Two devoted scholars, Mr. Abbey and Dr. Overton, spent much of their life in working at the ecclesiastical history of the eighteenth century. Now Mr. Rowden continues their labours, and his book certainly deserves a place on the shelf beside the volumes of Mr. Abbey and Dr. Overton. This is saying much, but it is not saying too much. Mr. Rowden has been fortunate in the use which he makes of the Wake MSS. at Christ Church, Oxford, and of the additional manuscripts in the British Museum. The former he has explored with great care, with the result that he has been able to make distinct contributions to our knowledge of the eighteenth century. The lives of William Wake, John Potter, Thomas Herring, Matthew Hutton, Thomas Secker, Frederick Cornwallis, John Moore, and Charles Manners Sutton are most skilfully written; there is not a dull page in the whole volume.

Of all the Primates none, for the reviewer, possesses so great interest as the first one, William Wake. He was a devoted parish priest, an excellent scholar, and a fine bishop. The common belief is that the English Church was comfortably asleep throughout the eighteenth century, but such a belief the author dispels. He does not for one moment suggest that all clergymen were of the type of Wake or Secker, but he does let us see that a great deal of faithful work was done quietly by many parochial clergy. The letters from Samuel Wesley, of course, possess much interest for the reader. We hear of Wesley's duty done so well at Epworth. We also hear of Wake's important relations with the French Church. Students have long been aware of the desire of Louis XIV. to do for his own communion what Henry VIII. did for his. A Reformation in France as far-reaching as that in England was almost carried out at the end of the seventeenth century. Here, indeed, we wish that Mr. Rowden had devoted more space to the attempts of Wake to effect a union between the French Church and the English. There are few chapters in the history of reunion so valuable as this.

Secker was the life long friend of Joseph Butler, and what greater testimony can we offer to his memory than to make this sufficient statement? Anything about the truly great Bishop of Durham is well worth having. We are interested in Secker for his own sake, for he was that extremely rare kind of man, a man of common, or rather uncommon, sense. It is a descent from the pages dealing with Wake and Secker to those which concern such men as Moore and Sutton. The former was a nepotist remarkable even in an age of nepotism. At the same time it is only fair to Moore's memory to say that he defended the rights of the Church against lay patrons. It will not occur to many to compare Moore with Swift, but there is a comparison in this point at least. The one as Archbishop, and the other as Dean, were exceedingly zealous in the defence of the rights pertaining to the position of each. This zeal, however, proves nothing as to their character as Christians. We can easily imagine that any able man will do much for his privileges when he is appointed to a post of influence.

Mr. Rowden has written so admirable an account of the Primates of the four Georges that we earnestly hope that he will turn his attention to the Archbishops of York of this period. A sketch, for example, of Archbishop Harcourt is a desideratum.

A SCIENTIST'S LETTERS.

Alfred Russell Wallace was a great man, and he accomplished a great work. His name is imperishably associated with that of Darwin, for they left the science of life, which they found a chaotic maze, an orderly system with a definite plan and a recognisable meaning. A man like Wallace springs from an ancestry competent to produce him; he is the final flower of converging hereditary forces that culminate at last in the full production of his forceful and exceptional personality. This aspect of Wallace is well brought out in the fine account that Mr. Marchant has given us of the letters and reminiscences. The author is equally fortunate in describing the amazing work which it was the mission of Wallace to perform in the world. Not only does Mr. Marchant describe this work admirably, but he also gives us its background. We are soon made aware that, in the opinion of the author, such work is also the last effect of antecedent conditions, the slow result of tendencies and ideas long in operation unseen or but little noticed beneath the surface of opinion, yet all conspiring gradually towards the definitive revolution at whose head, in the fulness of time, the genius of Darwin and Wallace placed themselves.

The names of these two thinkers will always be associated with the theory of evolution. The author holds that neither Darwin nor Wallace was the discoverer or the founder of the evolution hypothesis. They did not propound for the first time the theory which supposes that all plant and animal forms were the result of slow modification in pre-existent organisms. But both men gained for the evolutionary theory a far wider and more general acceptance than it had ever before received. They showed that natural selection was the agency by which definite kinds of plants and animals have been slowly evolved from simpler forms, with definite adaptations to the special circumstances by which they are surrounded. It was the peculiar glory of Wallace and Darwin not to have suggested that all the variety of animal and vegetable life might have been produced by slow modifications in one or more of the original types, but to have shown the machinery by which such a result could be actually attained in the practical working out of natural causes. Before the advent of these two men the theory of evolution was a grand perhaps; after them it was an epoch-making certainty.

It is pleasant to read once more of the memoir which Wallace sent home from Amboyna in 1858. Singularly enough, it was addressed to Darwin himself. Darwin opened and read his brother naturalist's paper, and found to his surprise that it contained his own theory of natural selection, not perfected in detail, but still complete in spirit and essence. Mr. Marchant is anxious to show how superior Darwin and Wallace were to the meannesses of jealousy, and there is no nobler page in the history of science than the generosity which each man showed to the other. At the same time some of the stoutest arguments aimed at the Darwinian theory of sexual selection were those of Wallace. In his eminently readable book on "Tropical Nature" Wallace urges with all his accustomed skill several cogent objections to the Darwinian hypothesis. Mr. Marchant describes the many-sided nature of Wallace, and has not a little to say about the naturalist's belief in spiritualism. For an account of these we refer our readers to the enthralling volumes before us. There is much about the scientist, and there is also much about the man. In the fourth part there is a charming review of his home life, and in the next part we learn his political and social views.

RECENT FICTION.

Miss Gertrude Page contrives an entertaining story round the escapades of a most loving and lovable young widow, who flies from London to a remote part of Scotland, thence to Cornwall, in order to hide from her young lover, whom she fears to marry because her arrival on this planet took place seven years previous to his. The adventures of Doreen Strangeways are many, but the most exciting ones are those which take place in Cornwall after she became the guest—without his knowledge—of a recluse. Miss Page introduces plenty of incident, finally culminating with an adventure which nearly costs the heroine her life, for she discovers a German submarine in a Cornish cove. The story concludes in the good old-fashioned way, with the capture and collapse of the lady in her lover's arms.

With the death of her Bohemian father in Italy and her adoption by a worthy British couple Dolores's life-story begins. The last of the improvident, hare-brained Fanes, at sixteen she has a fervent belief in the wonder of her own destiny and a burning ambition to reach the topmost pinnacle of fame behind the footlights. Dolores nearly follows the humdrum path of convention, after all; but, on the eve of her marriage to a nice young doctor who loves her, the villain enters, and his appeal to the wild blood of the Fanes is not in vain. It may be true to life that the honest lover should straightway fall out of the story, but it disappoints the reader.

To read of Patsy O'Connell's open-air week is almost as invigorating as a personal trip, and it is with reluctance that we part with her when she at last reaches Arden. Patsy is a charming Irish actress, whose goodness of heart sends her on a pilgrimage of mercy after "the Rich Man's son," because he is under a cloud. No story of a tramp through open country would be complete without a tinker, and though the one provided on the way to Arden is obviously make-believe, his company is none the less enjoyable to Patsy and to us.

IRISH GALLANTRY.

REWARDS FOR BRAVERY.

The Committee of the Royal Humane Society held its monthly meeting yesterday, and investigated a considerable number of cases of gallant action in saving, or attempting to save, life, the following awards being made in cases from Ireland:—

Testimonial and £1 to Michael Foley, Usher's quay, Dublin, for his gallantry in saving a man who had thrown himself into the Liffey on May 12.

Bronze medals to Lilias F. Orpin and Ruth Orpin, aged 17 and 15 respectively, daughters of Dr. Orpin, Youghal, Co. Cork, for their courageous action on May 3. Dr. Orpin, with his family and some friends, were on the Blackwater in a motor boat, which the strong tide carried broadside on against one of the pillars of the railway bridge crossing the river, and jerking a lad of twelve, named Whitfield, overboard. Instantly the two girls went after him, and between them kept him afloat until Dr. Orpin cleared the boat and succeeded in picking them up.

Testimonial to Benjamin James, aged 16, Bagenalstown, for his pluck in saving a younger lad from the canal part of the Barrow on April 22.

Testimonial and £2 to Stephen Harrington, fisherman, Allihies, near Berehaven, for his pluck in saving a man named Sullivan from the sea there on February 14.

Testimonials to John A. Smart and Patrick Culligan, constables R.I.C., for their rescue of a woman and child from the Grand Canal, Tullamore, on April 28.

Testimonial to Bernard Malone, Cootehill, Co. Cavan, for saving a girl from the river there on April 25.

COURTS-MARTIAL IN DUBLIN.

ASHBOURNE AFFRAY.

TRIAL OF A COUNTY SURVEYOR.

The trial by courtmartial of James Quigley, County Surveyor of County Meath, concluded yesterday at Richmond Barracks. The charge against Mr. Quigley was that, during the rising of Sinn Fein rebels in the County Meath on April 28th, he conveyed information by signal to them as to the whereabouts of the police, which might be helpful to them, and prejudicial to the peace and welfare of the King's subjects. The accused denied the charge, and, further, stated that he had neither hand, act nor part in the rebellion, and that he had no knowledge of the acts of the rebels, and that he had no sympathy with them. The evidence for the prosecution and for the defence closed on Thursday afternoon.

Major-General Lord Cheylesmore, K.C.V.O., again presided over the Court, and Mr. Kenneth Marshall acted as Judge Advocate.

Major E. G. Kimber, D.S.O., conducted the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Henry Hanna, K.C., and Mr. Lardner, M.P. (instructed by Mr. J. J. MacDonald), appeared for the accused.

Mr. Hanna addressed the Court upon the evidence. He submitted that the prosecution had not proved beyond all reasonable doubt that the accused was guilty of the charge against him. The accused had placed his statement as to his whole life and his acts that Friday before the Court, and that statement had been corroborated by many witnesses from all parts of the county, and he asked the Court to give all parts of that statement (which the law did not allow to be given on oath) the full weight to which it was entitled. Mr. Quigley was educated at an English school, and he had lived a considerable time in England. He had offered himself for the Army. His employers, the County Council, were shocked when they heard that he had been arrested. It should be remembered that he came from a town in which there were no Sinn Fein Volunteers. He had always been identified with the constitutional Volunteers, and he would be a traitor to his friends and associates, to himself, and to his past, if he were to do what he was here charged with. Counsel asked the Court with confidence to say that the prosecution had not turned the scale against the accused, and that was what should be done before the Court could convict. There was not a man from the County Meath among the Sinn Feiners who attacked the police at Ashbourne Cross. Those men had come from the County Dublin. The crucial point of the case was whether the accused had signalled to the rebels from the bog beside the road at Barronstown. Was there any necessity for signalling at all? He submitted that there was not, for there was no evidence that there were any rebels in Barronstown Wood. It was improbable that a stranger, never associated with Sinn Fein, should signal to a place where there were no troops, and also it was improbable that a man would signal with his hands at a distance of 1,200 yards. In conclusion, Mr. Hanna said that the whole of the accused's conduct was consistent with innocence, and that to find him guilty of aiding and abetting the enemy would be to find against the weight of evidence.

THE PROSECUTOR.

Major Kimber, the prosecutor, then addressed the Court on behalf of the Crown, and said if the case were merely one of suspicion he would not be there as prosecutor against a man holding the position the prisoner did—that of a County Surveyor. The correct expression was circumstantial evidence—it was upon circumstantial evidence he was asking the Court to convict. It was a case of a series of facts and circumstances which, when viewed together and in connection with other matters, he had to draw their attention to—when they put all these circumstances together the aggregate would be sufficient to find the accused guilty of the charge against him. What had been found in the way of arms in prisoner's house—a miniature rifle, a shot gun, a service rifle, as well as 34 rounds of service ammunition. What was that service ammunition for in Mr. Quigley's house? Was it for firing at ranges? Only small B.S.A. rifles were used in such practice. What was the service ammunition for? The Prosecutor then proceeded to review the evidence at length, and asked the Court to find the accused guilty.

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE.

The Judge Advocate, in summing up, said it was hardly necessary for him to say to the Court that Mr. Hanna, K.C., was perfectly right in opening his speech in saying that the duty of the prosecution was to prove beyond all reasonable doubt that the accused had committed the offence with which he was charged, and that unless they did prove it beyond all reasonable doubt the Court would not be justified in finding him guilty. In considering whether there was only suspicion against this man, or, as Major Kimber had suggested, sufficient circumstantial evidence, taking all the facts together, to justify conviction, it was necessary to bear in mind exactly what the charge against the accused was. That charge was one of aiding and abetting the commission of an act prohibited by the Defence of the Realm Act Regulations on the 28th April, near Ashbourne, in the County Meath, by conveying information to a number of persons then engaged in armed rebellion. That was the charge—that he conveyed information on that day to the rebels. It was not a general charge of being in sympathy with the rebels, but a particular charge of having conveyed information on that day. To come to the first actual occurrence on that day, he (the Judge Advocate) did not think any suspicion could attach to the movements of the accused in the early part of the day, and it was not until he came to Kilmoon that any suspicion was aroused. The accused had not had an opportunity of giving evidence, but he had made a statement, and it was a reasonable thing that he should read the accused's account of what happened after he got to Kilmoon. Having read the prisoner's statement, the Judge Advocate said that account agreed in nearly every detail with the account given by the police, with the one important exception—that the police said that when he was between Kilmoon and Curraha the accused entered a field by the side of the road, and one policeman said he saw him, when running towards a wood, in a stooped attitude, apparently signalling. The other policeman could only say that he saw the accused in the field. As Mr. Hanna had pointed out, it was rather remarkable that no other policemen had been called by the prosecution to corroborate that evidence. They would have thought that some other policemen in other motor cars would have had their attention called to the accused in the field, and would have been able to tell if they had seen him signalling. It was for the Court to consider whether they would accept the evidence of these policemen as correct, or whether they possibly had been mistaken, because unless the accused went into the field, or was seen making signals of some kind, he did not think they would be justified in saying that they were satisfied that he did convey any information to the rebels on that day. If they were satisfied that the accused attempted to convey signals to the rebels, they would further have to consider whether he did, in fact, succeed in signalling to them. It had been pointed out that he was a long way from the wood, and that it would be very difficult to see a man making signals, and the Court would have to consider whether it was likely, if the rebels were keeping a look-out from the wood, that it would be necessary for the accused to go into the field, because apparently the Causeway was visible from the wood, and the rebels would have seen the convoy of cars coming along. Did the Court think it was likely that such signals could convey anything more to the rebels than they saw themselves? The Prosecutor had suggested that the fact of the accused following up the police cars was against him, but it was for the Court to consider whether they would take that view of it or not. It seemed curious that if the accused had gone into the field and was signalling to the rebels he should have ridden up behind the cars just as the firing opened at Curraha Cross. Then there was the incident after the fighting, when the accused was said to have been friendly with the Sinn Feiners, and to have shaken hands with Ashe. It was a question whether the police witness had not mistaken the movement of shaking hands with that of handing Ashe his card. The Court should also consider whether accused had not become possessed of the rifle as a National Volunteer. Great stress had been laid by the prosecution on the finding of four copies of Nationality in the prisoner's house, but these papers were lying openly in the house, and it was for the Court to consider if great importance attached to it, or if he had not bought the papers merely for the purpose of seeing the views expressed therein.

DECISION OF THE COURT.

The Court, having retired to consider their verdict, returned after an absence of about half an hour.

The President—Having considered all the evidence, the Court find that the accused, James Quigley, is not guilty of the charge. The finding is read in open court, and the accused is released.

The announcement was received with slight applause, and the accused, having bowed to the Court, left in company with a number of relatives and friends.

ALLEGED MURDER OF A CONSTABLE.

ATTEMPT TO KILL MILITARY OFFICER.

THE REBELLION IN COUNTY LOUTH.

COURTMARTIAL IN DUBLIN.

A Courtmartial assembled yesterday afternoon at Richmond Barracks for the purpose of trying four young men on a charge of killing a police constable of the R.I.C. at Castlebellingham on Easter Monday, and attempting to kill a military officer.

Major-General Lord Cheylesmore, K.C.V.O., presided, and the Court consisted of twelve other officers.

Mr. Kenneth Marshall acted as Judge Advocate.

The accused were:—John McEntee, electrical engineer, Belfast; Frank Martin, house painter, Dublin; Denis Leahy, labourer, Dundalk; and James Sally, coach painter, Dundalk.

The first charge against them is: "Doing an act of such a nature as to be calculated to be prejudicial to the public safety and the Defence of the Realm, with the intention of, and for the purpose of, assisting the enemy, in that they, near Castlebellingham, Co. Louth, on the 24th April, 1916, whilst engaged in armed rebellion and the waging of war against His Majesty the King, feloniously and of their malice aforethought, did kill and murder Constable McGee of the Royal Irish Constabulary." The second charge against them is: "Doing an act of such a nature as to be calculated to be prejudicial to the public safety and the Defence of the Realm, with the intention and for the purpose of assisting the enemy, in that they, on the 24th April, near Castlebellingham, whilst engaged in armed rebellion, and waging war against the King, did attempt to kill and murder Lieutenant Robert Dunville, Grenadier Guards"; and the third charge was "the doing of an act prejudicial to the public safety and Defence of the Realm, with the intention and for the purpose of assisting the enemy, in that they took part in an armed rebellion in Ireland and the waging of war against the King."

Major Kimber, D.S.O., conducted the case for the prosecution.

Mr. T. M. Healy, K.C., M.P., and Mr. Cecil Lavery (instructed by Mr. Hamill, Dundalk) appeared for the accused, with the exception of McEntee, who was defended by Mr. Hanna, K.C., and Mr. McGrath (instructed by Mr. John Gore).

CASE AGAINST ACCUSED.

The Prosecutor (Major Kimber) briefly stated the facts of the case. He said on Sunday morning, April 23rd, a party of 73 men set out from Dundalk at ten o'clock in the morning. Nineteen of them were armed, and they went to Ardee. On the way they were met by a man in a motor car, in which there were rifles. These rifles were distributed to the men, who adopted military formations. McEntee was in charge of the party. They stayed at Ardee that night, and early on the morning of the 24th they started back towards Castlebellingham. At six in the evening they were at Lurgan Green, the party having been reduced to about 50. A man named Patrick McCormack, a farmer, came towards Sergeant Wymes, who had been following the party throughout, and accused McEntee of having wounded him in the hand with a revolver, and asked him to arrest him. McEntee replied—"I did it as a matter of duty. Ireland is proclaimed a Republic, and you must stand or fall by that fact." It was notorious that at mid-day that day rebellion had broken out in Dublin, and that the proclamation was issued proclaiming a Republic. Sergeant Wymes, whom they knew well, and two other constables, were made prisoners, and placed under an armed guard. Several motor cars passed on the road, and every vehicle passing was stopped and searched. That continued until 6.30, when the rebels went to Castlebellingham. About seven o'clock a party arrived at Castlebellingham and pulled up on the middle of the road, near the police barrack. McEntee and Martin came up and covered three policemen with revolvers. They were taken and placed with their backs against a railings. Martin was put in charge of them, and he said to them that if they stirred they would be shot. Whilst this was going on Constable McGee came up, riding a bicycle. McEntee ordered him to dismount and to deliver what despatches he had to him. The constable was searched, and his despatches taken from him. McGee was placed against the rail, and about twenty armed Volunteers were addressed by McEntee, who said: "See that your revolvers are properly loaded, and be ready to obey me." Then Lieutenant Dunville, in his motor car, came on the scene. He was stopped and ordered out of his car, and he and his chauffeur were put with the three men with their backs to the railings. The prisoner Leahy pointed his rifle at Lieutenant Dunville and then McEntee gave an order. The rebels got back to their cars, and shots were heard. Lieutenant Dunville was hit, and the charge went through his lung. Almost immediately Constable McGee was hit. He fell, and died in a couple of hours.

Sergeant M. Wymes, R.I.C., Dundalk, said that on Sunday, April 23rd, at 10 o'clock in the morning, he saw a body of twenty men, leaving a hall in the town. Nineteen of them were armed with rifles, double and single barrels, and they went on towards Ardee, accompanied by five cars. At Ardee he saw the prisoners, and he saw ammunition being handed out. They arrived at Slane about 8 o'clock, and stayed on the road till 12 o'clock at night, where they encamped. At a quarter to three in the morning they proceeded towards Collon. He traced their movements during the day to Castlebellingham. The party numbered fifty at Lurgan Green, mostly armed. That was at 6 p.m. Patrick McCormack came along with McEntee, and McCormack said that McEntee had shot him in the hand, and the latter said he did it as a matter of duty; that Ireland was proclaimed a Republic, and that he was prepared to stand or fall by his acts. He made witness a prisoner. Two Constables then came up, and they and he were searched and placed under an armed guard. The cars that passed were all commandeered and taken possession of by the Sinn Feiners. Witness was there for an hour and a half altogether under an armed guard. The main party of Sinn Feiners went away. He was allowed eventually to go away, and was given the password "Limerick," by which he was enabled to pass the rest of the rebels. He saw three of the accused, Martin, McEntee, and Sally bearing arms.

To Mr. Healy—He did not see Leahy there at all. He was a boy of seventeen. Neither of the three men offered him insult or harm. The police were released and given a safe conduct into Dundalk.

To Mr. Hanna—It was at Lurgan Green that he and his comrades were taken prisoners. He was present at the arrest of Martin.

ACTING SERGEANT KIERNAN.

Acting Sergeant Patrick Kiernan, Castlebellingham, stated that on Easter Monday he saw a party of armed men passing through the village between 4.30 and 5 p.m., going towards Dundalk. They were on foot. There were a couple of vehicles behind them. Some of them came back about 6.45—three cars and eleven armed men came back. They had shot guns and rifles. Witness did not recognise them as being in the first party. About fifteen minutes later about fifty men came from the Dundalk direction, armed with rifles, shot guns, and revolvers. The cars stopped near the end of the village, the last car being about 120 yards from the barracks. Witness took a constable with him down after the cars. As he approached McEntee, Martin, and two others presented revolvers at them, and ordered them to stand by the railing. McEntee said if they stirred one way or the other they would be shot dead. While standing there, Constable McGee came up on his bicycle, and McEntee and several others went towards him and ordered him to dismount. He got off, and they told him to stand with his back to the railings. McEntee asked him had he arms, and he said not, and McEntee ordered him to deliver up all papers on him, otherwise he would be shot. Constable McGee then handed what witness believed to be two despatches to McEntee. The constable was then searched for arms. After the search McEntee came down, and stood about a yard in front of witness, facing him. There would be about twenty others present, just behind the last motor car, all armed. McEntee said: "Now, men, keep your rifles at proper load, and be able to obey me when I give the order." Martin was then present. Lieutenant Dunville then came up in a motor car, and was stopped by McEntee and several others with revolvers and rifles. They pointed their weapons towards Lieutenant Dunville, who was taken out of the car and put standing by the railings. Witness saw the accused, Denis Leahy, standing about three yards away. Witness also saw James Sally present. The chauffeur was also ordered to leave the motor car. There were about twenty men at least covering witness and the other four men with rifles and revolvers. He then heard a shot from the direction of the first motor car. Lieutenant Dunville said, "I am shot," and commenced to fall back against the railings. Witness did not then see where he was shot, but afterwards found he was shot through the body. Another shot followed, and witness and Constable Donovan ran into a house. Two shots were fired as they crossed the road. Witness and the other policeman went out backwards and got to the barracks. He returned to the scene immediately, and found Constable McGee shot. The constable died within a few hours. All the cars went away, except one which broke down. That car contained a large amount of ammunition for rifles, revolvers, and shot guns.

The President said the rifle cartridges were American ammunition. The shotgun ammunition was a mixture of buckshot and ordinary shot.

Witness said a single-barrel shotgun, containing a discharged cartridge, was also in the motor car. The cartridge was jammed in the gun. There were also some books (produced) in the car, including "The Manual of Field Engineering" (1914), "The Field Service Pocket Book" (1914), "Musketry Regulations," "Section Company Drill Made Easy," and a book on range finding.

Cross-examined by Mr. Healy, K.C., M.P.—Witness did not see any of the prisoners firing shots. He could have been followed when taking refuge in the house. Witness, having referred to a notebook, handed it to Mr. Healy, with the consent of the Court.

Mr. Healy—And is this the way a man writes an entry: "James Sally, of Market street, at Castlebellingham, 24/6/'16, when policemen were shot." Do you pretend to this honourable Court that you wrote that down on that day? No, sir.

Witness, replying to the President, said he wrote the note on that night or the following day.

Mr. Healy, quoting from the notebook, read: "Denis Leahy, Hill street, Dundalk, seen by A. S. Kiernan at Castlebellingham, 24/4/'16, when the shooting outrage occurred, with a rifle"—is that right? It is right.

Will you explain when you made that statement about Sally, whether there was an inquest on poor McGee? I don't undestand you.

That is due to my Cork accent, I suppose. (Laughter.) You gave evidence at that inquest? I did. I made a deposition at the inquest on the 4th May. I don't think I was allowed to mention Sally's name.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hanna, K.C.—Witness saw despatches handed by McGee to McEntee, and McEntee gave them to another man. McEntee then gave back some letters to McGee.

I put it to you that McEntee took the letters away, consulted another man, and then came back and returned some of them to McGee? He did not, sir.

Constable Patrick Donovan, R.I.C., stationed at Castlebellingham, answering Major Kimber, said he remembered going before the rebels' cars to stop them on Easter Monday about 7 p.m. As he got in front of the cars he was "halted" by four men, of whom two were the accused, McEntee and Martin, both being armed with revolvers. McEntee placed him beside the railing, and put Martin in charge of him, with directions that if he did anything he should be shot. The police were in uniform, but they had no arms. He saw McEntee stop Constable McGee with a revolver pointed at him. McEntee told him that if he resisted he would be shot. There were a lot of rebels round about, and they were all armed. He saw Lieutenant Dunville and his chauffeur ordered out of their car by McEntee, who covered them with his revolver. Witness asked the men who placed them against the railing not to shoot them.

To Mr. Healy—Although he and Sergeant Kiernan were covered by revolvers they were allowed to take refuge in the public-house across the road. Do you suggest that if those men wished to harm the police at that time they could not have killed you? I do not.

LIEUTENANT DUNVILLE'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Second Lieutenant Robert Dunville, of the Grenadier Guards, said he was travelling by motor car from Belfast to Kingstown on Easter Monday, accompanied by his chauffeur. They arrived at Castlebellingham about ten minutes to seven. When he entered the village he saw three policemen on the left hand side of the road near the railings. He also saw a considerable number of men in motor cars, and some on the road—all armed, some with revolvers, some had automatic pistols, others carbines and ordinary rifles. As he could not get through he pulled his car up, and a man whom he identified as the accused, Leahy, came up and pointed a rifle at him. Then McEntee came up and presented a pistol at him. Witness asked them what it was all about, told him that he wanted to catch the boat from Kingstown, and to let him pass. McEntee said something about being civil to him, and witness said that if McEntee were civil to him he would be civil to McEntee. His chauffeur and himself were placed with the police at the railings. Then a man got out of one of the cars, and aimed a long rifle at him. He heard a report, and somebody at his right hand side shouted, and he found that he himself had been shot; that the bullet passed through his breast from left to right. He saw a rifle still pointed at him after he was hit. After that he fell, and he was removed to his car.

The Prosecutor—Did you see anyone else that you recognised but McEntee? I saw Leahy and Martin.

Did you notice who was in command of the rebel party? It seemed to be McEntee.

To Mr. Healy.—I think McGee was shot before the other police ran away.

The President—Can you tell us how many shots were fired before you were shot yourself? Two.

Are you quite sure that McGee was wounded before you were? Yes. I heard the shot, but I did not see McGee fall.

The witness said that the tyre of his car was damaged by a shot.

The President—Before you were shot was any of the accused in front of you? McEntee was almost in front of me.

The other men had gone down the road? Yes; they had moved away.

Then McEntee was practically the only man left when you were shot? Yes.

You don't know who fired the shot? I don't.

Were you wounded by a rifle or revolver bullet? I don't know. It was a very small hole.

But it went right through your body? Yes.

Could you recognise the man who was pointing the long rifle at you? I could.

Is he one of the accused? No.

Edward O'Brien, chauffeur in the employment of Lieutenant Dunville, gave corroborative evidence, and identified McEntee as having presented a revolver at him. Witness heard no orders given. He identified Leahy as having presented a rifle at Lieutenant Dunville. Witness assisted Constable McGee after he had been shot.

To Mr. Hanna, K.C.—It was not any of the four prisoners who fired the shot that killed McGee. He did not know who fired the shot that wounded his master.

Dr. Patrick J. O'Hagan, Castlebellingham, described the nature of Constable McGee's injuries. He was suffering from four bullet wounds, two in the left arm, and two in the body. Witness was present at the post-mortem and attributed death to shock and hemorrhage, resulting from bullet wounds. Witness also attended Lieutenant Dunville, and found two wounds on the chest, one on the left, being apparently the wound of entry.

By Mr. Hanna, K.C.—Witness would not like to say that Lieutenant Dunville's wound had been caused by buckshot, which seemed too small.

The Court adjourned until 10.30 a.m. to-day.

SHIPMENTS OF CATTLE FROM IRELAND.

DEPARTMENT'S CONTRADICTION.

Attention has been drawn to a newspaper paragraph stating that as a result of discussions at the Department of Agriculture it has been decided that for the next few months no exports of cattle or meat of any kind will be allowed, with the exception of two small consignments. The paragraph having created considerable alarm among stock-owners and dealers, the Department desire to make it known at once that the statement it contains is absolutely without foundation.

GOLFING NOTES.

While in the United Kingdom it is a question of carrying the game on in any way, golf in the United States continues to grow in popularity at an extraordinary rate. It is, indeed, no certainty that, when the war is over, we shall not find more adherents of the game in the States than in these countries. At any rate, this is the conclusion one comes to from perusal of the glowing accounts coming daily to hand of the wonderful degree of prosperity which the game has attained in New York. In a recent article in the Sportsman, Mr. R. E. Howard discloses some surprising facts concerning the rapid strides the game is making, and, though the remarks apply solely to New York, we are given to understand that much the same progress is being made in other parts.

It is generally admitted that the event that did most to stimulate the youths of America to play golf was the victory of Mr. Francis Ouimet over Vardon and Ray in the United States open championship of 1913. Previous to Mr. Ouimet's great achievement there was an idea abroad, much the same as at one time prevailed in the minds of the people of these countries, that golf was a rich man's game, suited only to elderly people. Mr. Ouimet, a mere boy, the son of a landscape gardener, stirred the imagination of the American youths, and his victory did more towards popularising the game than anything else. From the playing of that memorable match dates the commencement of the popularising of the game in America.

It is estimated that in New York district alone there are 5,000 converts to golf this spring, and the number of players in the same district is put down as 50,000. It is said that there are not enough courses to accommodate all who want to join, although seven new clubs have been opened in Long Island alone, including one at Long Beach—it is called the Lido Club—on which a sum of a million dollars has been spent. The pace at which money is being spent on courses and equipment is another indication of the enthusiasm that has developed for a game which up to four or five years ago was played by comparatively few in the country.

An instance of the "boom" is that the Californian Association wishes to charter a special train to convey 150 competitors free of charge from Chicago to Del Monte California and back, a distance of something like 5,000 miles for the double journey, on the occasion of the Western amateur championship next month. The directors of the Western Association have rejected this proposal, because they maintain that its acceptance would make the guests professionals, while the delegates—numbering 100 or more—have accepted it by an overwhelming majority, and intimated that they have every right to direct the directors. There the matter stands at present, but an easy solution to the difficulty would surely be arrived at by consulting the ruling golfing authorities.

There are now about 3,000 courses in the United States, and prize meetings are becoming so popular that a sum of two million dollars will be offered in trophies during the coming season. In this respect the American differs from the Briton in his views as to the best means for deriving enjoyment out of the game. It is the prize competition that appeals strongest to the American, and as the number of players increase so must the number of competitions. Nearly every club holds invitation tournaments, as well as innumerable events confined to members, in which there are as many prizes as blanks. A plan commonly adopted is, after the qualifying stroke rounds, to split the players up into parties of sixteen each, according to their scores, and to hold a separate tournament for each sixteen; so that no matter how poor the golfer, he is fairly certain to win a prize some time or other.

Statistics show that, apart from professionals' shops at the clubs, there are now 4,500 firms in America who deal in golf goods. Fifteen years ago there were hardly 100 shops where a golf club or ball could be purchased, but now hardware shops and other establishments make a special feature of such articles. The spring is, of course, the time at which the game is at the height of its popularity. The fact that there is a close season, and that April witnesses an annual re-opening, seems to give this latter an éclat that attracts newcomers in a body.

All these interesting details of the progress of the game in the United States remind us of the state of prosperity the game had achieved in these countries just at the time the war broke out. Just as in America now, the trouble with us then was to keep pace with the demands for new courses, consequent upon the yearly increasing thousands of converts to the game. Had there been no war to disturb us from the pleasant pursuits we then engaged in, how much further would the game have advanced? Would all the players have found links on which to play?

The overcrowding of courses on Saturdays and holidays was a question giving rise to considerable discussion amongst club committees prior to the war, and by this time it is safe to assume that matters would have been infinitely worse. The war, though so far possessing few redeeming features, may quite possibly have solved a difficulty for golfers which otherwise would have given untold trouble. While at the present time we are inclined to look almost with envious eyes at the Americans, there is satisfaction in the knowledge that when peace is eventually restored there will be no hindrance to an immediate resumption of the activities of the game, and in time golf will again attain to the same popularity as in pre-war times.

ANGLING.

WATERVILLE.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

The weather on the whole has been unfavourable for angling. Only a few boats have been out salmon fishing on the lough. The following fish were had on this water since last report:—June 3rd, Rev. M. R. Thurburn, three salmon (all with fly), weighing, respectively, 14lb., 12lb., and 11lb.; June 5th, Sir Thomas Hughes, one, 11lb.; June 6th, Rev. M. R. Thurburn, one 12½lb. A few sea trout were had. They averaged about 2lb. in weight. Brown trout fishing is still very moderate, but some good sport has been had occasionally with these fish by local anglers rock-fishing at the "Black Point" and elsewhere. Sport is still slack with brown trout on the upper lakes. Heavy rain has fallen, and sea trout are now coming up into these waters in better numbers. On the minor loughs that hold brown trout only sport has been dull, but on one of them (Cummeravanig) a basket of four dozen was had. Only a few of the fish weighed over 1lb. As regards sea angling, matters have shown considerable improvement, the weather having become seasonable and the sea quite calm.

BILLIARDS.

STEVENSON v. NEWMAN.—Splendid billiards marked the progress of play at Leicester square, London, yesterday afternoon, when Stevenson resumed the task of giving Newman 1,000 start in 18,000. Newman averaged 65 for an aggregate of 922, against the ex-champion's 54 and 769. The principal breaks were 126, 89, 146, 72, and 421 by Newman, and 157, 69, 183, 68, 119, and 132 by Stevenson. Interval scores—Newman (rec. 1,000), 15,688; Stevenson (in play), 15,020. Stevenson made a big effort at night, and is now only 170 behind. The Yorkshireman scored 1,025 to 527, the respective averages being 64 and 35. The highest compilations were 71 (full), 159, 90, 101, 75, 140, 188, and 135 by Stevenson, and 104, 54, 115, and 71 by Newman. Closing scores—Newman (in play), 16,215; Stevenson, 16,045.

KINGSTOWN COUNCIL AND LORD KITCHENER.

Mr. J. J. Kennedy (Chairman) presided at the adjourned meeting of the Kingstown Urban Council yesterday.

The Chairman said before commencing the business he desired to bring under their notice what they had all learned with the deepest possible regret—the lamented death of Earl Kitchener. He thought it was fitting that the Council should pay their little tribute and join in the nation's sorrow on the death of so able and so great a man. Every subject of His Majesty must deplore the tragic end of such a great and noble career. The relatives of Lord Kitchener and of those who died with him are certainly eminently entitled to the nation's sympathy and condolence. He lived a soldier, he spent his life in the cause of his country, and, perhaps, his end was a fitting one to such a noble career, because he died in harness, as a true soldier should. Therefore, he desired to move:—

That we, the Council of the Urban District of Kingstown, at this, our first meeting since the lamented and tragic death of Lord Kitchener and his Staff, beg respectfully to offer to His Majesty the King and to the British Government the Council's sympathy with them in the sorrow that is felt by the nation at large. We are proud to remember that the noble Earl was an Irishman, and we desire to place on record our appreciation of the great services rendered by him to the Empire; that our deepest sympathy be also tendered to the family and relatives of the late Lord Kitchener, and the families of his Staff, who perished with him in the service of their King and country.

Sir Thomas Robinson seconded the motion, which was passed unanimously.

SPORTING NEWS.

LEOPARDSTOWN MEETING, YESTERDAY.

CADOGAN PLATE.

THE PILE DISQUALIFIED.

A heavy thunderstorm visited Leopardstown yesterday, shortly before proceedings were timed to commence; but happily it was of short duration, and the afternoon turned out fine, so that little fault could be found with the conditions under which racing was resumed in this country. There was a good attendance in the enclosures, and a capital day's sport rewarded visitors. Backers, however, fared none too well, and the disqualification of The Pile for the Cadogan Plate was a particularly severe blow to punters.

The Bray Selling Hurdle, which ushered in the proceedings, attracted a big fleet of timber-toppers to the post, and of these Starboard Light and Knight of the Heather found most favour in a weak market. Neither, however, flattered, and, after leading all the way, Tumbril scored, with a bit in hand from Belle o' the Hunt, who made up a lot of leeway from the last flight, up to which point Drimineer had been prominent.

There was some brisk wagering associated with the Stand Plate, Minstrel Joy, Lovely Morning, and Tinahinch being supported with great confidence; but the first-named, after being out by himself at half way, shut up like a clasp knife breasting the hill, and in a desperate set-to between the other pair, Lovely Morning prevailed by a short head, with Inconstant George close in their wake.

The field for the Cadogan Plate stopped short at nine, and the successful Mountjoy Lodge supplied a much-fancied pair in The Pile and Ailna, and there was also some money for Blackwater Valley, who, like Ailna, was making his debut in public. But for losing ground at the start Mrs. Moloney's colt would have been nearer the leaders at the finish, and he should pay his way in the future. The story of the race does not require much telling, as The Pile had the foot of the others all the way, and won with consummate ease, only to be met with an objection, which proved fatal. It appears a 4lb. breeding allowance was claimed at entry, to which she was not entitled, and hence the Stewards had no option but to disqualify her, and award the race to Referee, who started at the outside price of 50 to 1. The mistake was very unfortunate for the owner of The Pile, who is on active service, as she won with a lot more in hand than 4lb., and it was also very rough on the filly's backers. Llangollen came to the rescue of the punters in the Irish National Hunt Steeplechase (given by the I.N.H.S. Committee), in which his most formidable opponent was Ragged Robin, from whom he was in receipt of 8lb., and Inconstant George made amends for his failure in the second race of the day by accounting for twelve others in the Foxrock Plate. The class now was not quite so good; but he ran out his race very generously, and credited Mrs. Leahy with her first win. Lally Ex, who was served up a hot favourite for the Tower Plate, had nothing to say to the finish, and the winner was forthcoming in Philander, who landed a 20 to 1 chance for Mr. G. Formby, the well-known music hall artist, whose colours had not, up to yesterday, been to the fore. Details:—

Betting—5 to 1 each agst. Knight of the Heather and Starboard Light, 7 to 1 Aunt Eliza, 8 to 1 each TUMBRIL, Clonmore II., and Sailcloth, 10 to 1 each Ennis, Drimineer, and Crovederg; 100 to 8 Bonmahon, 50 to 1 Belle o' the Hunt or any other.

Tumbril went on in front of Starboard Light, Jagenal, and Bonmahon, with Aunt Eliza, Ennis, and Bell o' the Hunt at the head of the others. So they ran for a mile, when Drimineer took second place, but soon dropped back again, and at the last hurdle Tumbril was followed by Bonmahon and Belle o' the Hunt. The pair closed with the leader on the flat, but never got on terms, and Tumbril, after making all the running, won by half a length; three-quarters of a length separated second and third. Aunt Eliza was fourth, Crovederg fifth, Starboard Light sixth, and Knight of the Heather next.

2.15—THE STAND PLATE of 100 sovs. A handicap flat race. Five furlongs.

Mr. Sullivan's b. c. LOVELY MORNING, by Acclaim—Bright Morn, 3, 7-10....J. Sinnott 1

Crisp). (Winner trained by P. Behan, at Mountjoy Lodge, Curragh.)

Betting—3 to 1 each agst. LOVELY MORNING and Minstrel Joy, 4 to 1 Tinnahinch, 6 to 1 The Kish, 8 to 1 Inconstant George, 10 to 1 any other.

Fanchon began slowly, and Minstrel Joy, being quickest away, carried on the running from Tinahinch, Raffles V., Artist's Model, and Inconstant George, with Lovely Morning at the head of the others. Minstrel Joy was beaten at four furlongs, and Tinahinch then went to the front, closely followed by Inconstant George and Lovely Morning, and the latter of this pair challenging close home won by a short head; three lengths divided second and third. The Kish was fourth, Peg Rafter fifth, Minstrel Joy sixth, Raffles V. seventh, and Barty next.

2.45.—THE CADOGAN PLATE of 200 sovs. For two years old. Colts, 9st.; fillies and geldings, 8st. 11lb. Five furlongs.

Mr. W. C. Carr's ch. c. REFEREE, by Captivation—Fair Play, 8-6 ......Joseph Harty 1
Mr. W. H. West's G.R., 8-6 ......D. Ward 2

Also ran—Mr. J. Daly's Ailna, 8-3, car. 8-8 (F. Hunter); Mr. B. M. Slocock's Sokoto, 7-13 (J. Patman); Mr. B. M. Slocock's Skehana, 7-13 (J. Gorman); Mr. A. N. Reynolds' Smyla, 8-7 (R. Crisp); Capt. R. C. Knox's Redouble, 8-6, car. 8-7 (W. Barrett); Major D. Dixon's The Pile, 8-10 (Joseph Canty), disq. (Winner trained by M. Reidy, at Brownstown, Curragh.)

Betting—Evens The Pile, 5 to 2 agst. Ailna, 7 to 1 Lord Blackwater, 100 to 8 Skehana, 20 to 1 each Redouble and G.R., 50 to 1 REFEREE or any other.

Lord Blackwater lost ground at the start, and Redouble, jumping off in front, led from The Pile, Skehana, Ailna, Referee, and Sokoto. After a couple of furlongs The Pile headed Redouble, and drawing away at every stride won in a canter by six lengths from Referee, with G.R. two lengths off third. Lord Blackwater was fourth, Smyla fifth, Sokoto sixth, and Redouble next.

An objection to the winner for carrying wrong weight was upheld, and the race awarded to Referee. Lord Blackwater, who was officially placed fourth, becomes third.

The Stewards fined the owner of The Pile £10 for claiming an allowance to which she was not entitled.

3.15.—THE IRISH NATIONAL HUNT STEEPLECHASE of 150 sovs. (given by the I.N.H.S. Committee). Weight for age. Three miles.

Mr. J. J. Maher's br. g. LLANGOLLEN, by Llangibby—Circe, 6, 11-12 ...Mr. J. Manley 1

Harty); Mr. P. Madden's Brennan, 4, 10-9 (F. Morgan); Mr. T. O'Roarke's Awbeg, 5, 11-9 (Owner); Mr. J. Gordon's Tubbermurry, 6, 11-4 (W. Lynn); Mr. L. S. Ward's Golden Fleece, 5, 11-3 (Owner). (Winner trained by Owner, at Clonsilla.)

Mr. H. J. Kirwan's Carriganeeny, 5, 11-3, was weighed out for by R. Moss, but threw his rider in the preliminary, and his number was withdrawn by permission.

Betting—5 to 2 agst. LLANGOLLEN, 6 to 1 each Tubbermurry and Sergeant Murphy, 7 to 1 Ragged Robin, 8 to 1 each Honey Boy, Landwehr, and Brennan, 20 to 1 any other.

Sergeant Murphy cut out the work from Llangollen, Honey Boy, and Landwehr, with Ragged Robin and Golden Fleece at the head of the others, and Tubbermurry last. At half-way Golden Fleece, Landwehr, and Honey Boy fell, and a little further on Tubbermurry came to grief. Three-quarters of a mile from home Flygate fell, and interfering with Sergeant Murphy the latter dropped back. Llangollen then took up the running, and holding Ragged Robin at bay won by a length and a half; eight lengths divided second and third. Awbeg was fourth and Brennan next, these being the only others to complete the course.

3.45.—THE FOXROCK SELLING HANDICAP of 100 sovs. A handicap. Winner to be sold of 100 sovs. Winner to be sold for 50 sovs. Five furlongs.

At the top of the course Inconstant George headed Torc, and drawing clear away won by two and a half lengths; a length divided second and third. There was no bid for the winner.

Dunkippor led from King Silk, Mount Edgar, and Iotnas, with Lally Ex and Philander next, and so they ran until a quarter of a mile from home, when King Silk drew to the front, followed by Dunkippor, Lally Ex, and Philander. At the turn into the straight Philander assumed command, and resisting a challenge from Almholme won by two lengths; three-parts of a length divided second and third. Lally Ex was fourth, King Silk fifth, Fair Passenger sixth, Fascinator seventh, Mount Edgar eighth, and Herodia next.

SELECTIONS FOR TO-DAY.

Another attractive programme will be submitted on the concluding day, and runners are likely to again be forthcoming in strong force. The chief event, the Produce Stakes, will be robbed of some of its interest should Ossory be an absentee, as is probable, and but little is known of the other candidates, most of whom will be making a first appearance in public. Selections are appended:—

County Plate—Brave Chap.
Lawn Plate—Gilt Edge or Grey Fox.
Produce Stakes—Mordennis.
Shankill Plate—Bachelor's Gift.
Kingstown Plate—Wise Symon.
Paddock Plate—Ragged Robin or Privit.

ATHLETICS AND CYCLING.

BOYS' BRIGADE SPORTS.

To-day, by permission of the Irish Rugby Football Union, the Dublin Battalion of the Boys' Brigade will hold their annual sports at Lansdowne road. The opening event is timed for 3 o'clock, and as in previous years the competition for the Plunket and Chancellor Cups will invest the afternoon's proceedings with considerable interest. The band of the D.M.P. will be in attendance, and the prizes will be distributed by Mrs. W. Edgeworth-Johnstone.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

Seventy-eight horses ran at Leopardstown yesterday.

Neither Lanius nor Elkington will be sent across from Newmarket to run for the Dublin Plate at Baldoyle.

The well-known American sportsman, Mr. G. H. Brown, has purchased Fair Mac from Mr. Parkinson, and the colt will run in his new owner's name and colours in the Dublin Plate at Baldoyle.

The first race at Leopardstown yesterday was put back fifteen minutes, by order of the Stewards, owing to the prevalence of a thunderstorm at the time fixed for the opening event.

The field for the Baldoyle Derby next Tuesday will be made up of the following:—Cimarron, Brendan (F. Hunter), Captive Princess, Little May II. colt, Irish Field (Joseph Harty), Lukeston (C. Aylin), and Zefus (Mr. W. J. Parkinson).

After winning the Cadogan Plate in a canter at Leopardstown yesterday The Pile was disqualified for carrying wrong weight, and the race awarded to Referee, who started at 50 to 1. The Stewards fined the owner of The Pile £10 for claiming an allowance to which he was not entitled.

Owing to the death of his brother-in-law, Hon. Barry Bingham, who went down with his ship in the battle of Jutland, Capt. H. Dixon's horses will run in the name and colours of Mr. J. J. Parkinson for the present. Mr. Bingham was a fine steeplechase rider, and steered Lord Charles to victory in the Kildare Hunt Cup five years ago.

A. Wheatley, who was one of De Mestre's apprentices, and was taken out to South Africa by Mr. J. Russell, the well-known owner-trainer, won six races at Durban some weeks back on one afternoon, thus tying with the record set up by J. E. Boardman at Kenilworth in 1905. Just previously Wheatley had ridden King's Jester to victory at Pretoria after a triple dead-heat.

NEW REGULATIONS FOR RACE MEETINGS.

Permission Vested in Minister of Munitions.

By an Order in Council, published in last night's London Gazette, the following new regulation has been made under the Defence of the Realm Act:—

"Where there is reason to apprehend that the holding of any race meeting will impede or delay the production, repair, or transport of war material, or any work necessary for the successful prosecution of the war, it shall be lawful for the Minister of Munitions to make an order prohibiting the holding of the race meeting, and if the race meeting is attempted to be held in contravention of any such prohibition it shall be lawful to take such steps as may be necessary to prevent the holding thereof.

"In the case of a race meeting to be held after the 15th day of June, 1916, before the meeting is held, at least seven days' clear notice in writing shall be sent to the Minister of Munitions.

"If any person takes part in the control, management, or organisation of any race meeting which is prohibited under this section, or in respect of which such notice as aforesaid has not been given, or allows any horse to run at any such meeting, or brings any horse to a place where any such meeting is proposed to be held, for the purpose of taking part in any race, he shall be guilty of a summary offence against these Regulations.

"For the purpose of this Regulation, race meeting means any meeting for racing with horses open to the public, whether on payment or otherwise."

LAW REPORTS.

ARKLOW MARINER'S ESTATE.

In the Chancery Division yesterday, Mr. Justice Barton delivered judgment in the case of Murray v. Condren and others. It was a summons brought by Mrs. Mary Jane Murray, widow of the late Mr. Charles Murray, master mariner, of Arklow, Co. Wicklow, for the determination of certain questions arising in connection with the estate of her deceased husband. The principal point for decision was whether certain leasehold premises in Arklow, held under a lease pour autre vie, went in the events that have happened to the heiress-at-law, Miss Dora Murray, or to the personal representatives of the deceased, Mr. Daniel Condren and Mr. John Mulligan, and thence to the next-of-kin. The premises were held under a lease of the 10th August, 1867, in which the demise was to the lessee, his heirs, and assignees, but in the assignment to the testator, dated 2nd August, 1901, the conveyance was made to him without words of limitation, and under the testator's will there was an intestacy in regard to these premises. It appears that the law in Ireland and in England is somewhat different on the point, and in Ireland there have been several obiter dicta of distinguished judges supporting the contention of the heiress-at-law that the premises went to her as special occupant.

Mr. Justice Barton, in giving judgment, followed the decision in the English case of Mountcashel v. Smith, and said the greater weight of authority was in favour of the argument of the personal representatives, and he accordingly decided that the premises descended to them and not to the heiress-at-law.

Mr. Hewitt Poole (instructed by Mr. Geo. F. Fleming) appeared for the plaintiff, Mrs. Murray; Mr. Lupton (instructed by Mr. D. C. Bergin) for the executors, Messrs. Condren and Mulligan; and Mr Walker, K.C., and Mr. James Sealy (instructed by Messrs. M. J. O'Connor and Co.) for Miss Dora Murray, the heiress-at-law.

DUBLIN LAW STATIONER'S ESTATE.

In the Chancery Division yesterday, Mr. Justice Barton gave judgment in the case of King v. King. It was an action to administer the estate of the late Mr. W. King, law stationer, of Upper Ormond quay, and Palmerston road, Dublin. The plaintiff Mr. Thomas W. King, a son of the testator, was bequeathed the business, and the defendants, the testator's three daughters, were bequeathed certain legacies. Two other sons were also legatees, and, with the plaintiff, were residuary legatees. The plaintiff claimed a sum of £480 as coming to him under the will of the testator, being the proceeds of a cheque which, the plaintiff claimed, was given to him by his father in his lifetime for the purposes of the business. It was not fully expended for those purposes, and the plaintiff claimed that, under the terms of the will, it passed to him. The defendants claimed that this cheque was intended to provide the sum of £300 for them. The residuary legatees claimed that the entire proceeds of the cheque formed part of the residuary estate.

Mr. Justice Barton decided that the proceeds of the cheque, less by a sum of £30, which had been applied for the purposes of the business, fell into the residue, and did not pass either to the plaintiff under the will or to the defendants as contended for by them. He decreed administration of the estate, and directed the usual accounts and inquiries.

Mr. Serjeant Matheson and Mr. E. S. Murphy (instructed by Mr. E. Jameson) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. S. L. Brown, K.C., and Mr. Charles Murphy (instructed by Mr. A. Walker) for the defendants; Mr. Littledale, K.C. (instructed by Mr. J. H. McLoughlin) for Mr. A. W. King, a residuary legatee; and Mr. Leech, K.C. (instructed by Mr. E. Jameson) for Mr. W. W. King, another legatee.

TUAM INJUNCTION PROCEEDINGS.

In the Chancery Division yesterday, before Mr. Justice Barton, in the case of Sarah Flattery v. Luke Shaughnessy and Catherine Shaughnessy,

Mr. Leonard (instructed by Mr. P. M. Hosty) applied on behalf of the plaintiff for judgment in the action. It appeared that the defendants had been in possession for about two years of a house and land upon the plaintiff's property at Ardacong, near Tuam, Co. Galway. On the 25th June, 1915, an injunction was obtained by the plaintiff against the present defendants, and on the same occasion four other defendants in the action, members of the United Irish League, gave an undertaking, by counsel, not to trespass upon plaintiff's lands or interfere with her use and enjoyment of them. These four defendants had complied with their undertaking, but the present defendants had continued to hold possession of the house and lands, despite the plaintiff's protests. An application to commit Catherine Shaughnessy, in respect of her disobedience of the order having proved unsuccessful, it became necessary to institute the present action, in which the plaintiff claimed a declaration that she was entitled to the house and land in question; an injunction against trespassing; an order requiring the defendants forthwith to deliver up possession of the premises, and an order that the plaintiff be quieted in possession of the house and lands.

Mr. Dockrell (instructed by Mr. Concannon), for the defendants, applied that a stay should be placed on the execution of the order asked for.

Mr. Justice Barton made an order in the terms of the prayer of the application, and refused a stay, stating that he had no power to grant it.

BANKRUPT COMMITTED.

Yesterday, in the Bankruptcy Court, before Mr. Justice Pim, Daniel Magee, shopkeeper, Garrison, Co. Fermanagh, a bankrupt, attended for examination. He had been in business six years, and had returned his liabilities as about £930, and his assets as consisting of £80 debts, £60 stock-in-trade, and 18/6 cash in hands.

The bankrupt was examined by Mr. Maguire, who (instructed by Messrs. Cussen and Kieran) appeared for the assignees. Other witnesses were also examined as to the whereabouts of the goods.

Mr. Justice Pim made an order for the committal of the bankrupt for unsatisfactory answering. He cautioned the other witnesses that if they did not tell the truth and make a full disclosure they would be similarly dealt with.

BRIDE'S FORTUNE TO BE RETURNED.

Judgment was delivered in the Court of Appeal yesterday by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Justice Ronan, and Lord Justice Molony, in the matrimonial case of Price v. Price, which came before the Court on appeal from a judgment of the King's Bench Division. The action was by Mrs. Mary Ann McDonnell, of Toomevara, Co. Tipperary, who was, at the date of the writ, the wife of Timothy Price farmer, of Killea, Templemore, claiming a return of her "fortune" of £475 paid to the defendant at the date of the marriage ceremony. It was alleged that there was an arrangement between the parties that £400 of the fortune should be applied in redeeming a charge on the defendant's farm in favour of his sister, and that the balance should be applied for his own benefit. The marriage had never been consummated, and on 11th May, 1915, it was declared null and void. The present proceedings had been instituted in February of the same year, and at the original hearing at Clonmel Assizes it was contended that it should not have been brought until after the nullity proceedings. The action had been dismissed. On appeal to the King's Bench Division, the Court (consisting of Mr. Justice Madden, Mr. Justice Boyd, and Mr. Justice Dodd) reversed the dismiss, and declared that the plaintiff was entitled to stand in the place of the owner of the charge of £400 paid off by her money, and that the charge was a valid charge upon the farm. As to the £75, which had been spent by the defendant while the plaintiff lived with him as his wife, they held that that could not be recovered. The defendant appealed.

The Court delivered considered judgments, and unanimously dismissed the appeal. The making up of a formal order was postponed till next Wednesday.

Counsel for the plaintiff—Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, Mr. Gibson, K.C., and Mr. Swayne (instructed by Mr. L J Ryan).

For the defendant—Mr. Samuels, K.C., and Mr. Mark Cooper (instructed by Mr. A. H. Morgan).

MEATH LADY'S ESTATE.

In the Chancery Division yesterday, before Mr. Justice Barton, in the case of the Rev. John Leonard v. Mary Dowling, an appeal was heard from a decision of the County Court Judge of Meath. Margaret Eiffe, late of Ardcath, Co. Meath, made her will on the 2nd January, 1915, whereby she appointed the plaintiff her executor, and devised and bequeathed all her property to him upon trust to convert it into money, and after payment of debts and funeral expenses to apply the surplus for the purpose of celebrating Masses for the repose of her soul and the souls of her parents, sister, and brothers. The testatrix died two days after making her will. Her property consisted of a small farm of land, which had been bought out under the Land Purchase Acts. It was subsequently sold for £400, and the stock, crops, etc., realised £125. Proceedings were instituted before the County Court Judge for the administration of the estate of the deceased, and the County Court Judge held that the bequest contained in the will, so far as the proceeds of the farm were concerned was void, the testatrix having died within three months of making the will, and that the proceeds passed to the next-of-kin. He further held that the entire of the debts, funeral, and testamentary expenses of the deceased, including the costs of the action, should be borne by the pure personalty, in exoneration of the proceeds of the sale of the land. From this decision the plaintiff appealed.

Mr. Justice Barton held that the testatrix, by her will and the direction for sale, had created a mixed fund of realty and personalty, and that the debts, funeral and testamentary expenses were payable out of the mixed fund, and should, therefore, be borne rateably by the proceeds of the farm and by the pure personalty.

Mr. T. S. McCann, K.C., and Mr. John O'Byrne (instructed by Mr. J. J. Lynch) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Mr. Tiernan) for the defendant, one of the next-of-kin; and Mr. E. S. Murphy (instructed by Messrs. J. Clark and Co.) for Richard Dowling, another of the next-of-kin.

LOUTH WILL SUIT.

Yesterday, at Nisi Prius, the case of Patrick Duffy v. Arthur M'Keon was specially fixed for hearing before Mr. Justice Gordon and a common jury. The action was to establish the will of the late Edward M'Keon, of Lisdoo, Co. Louth, who was a well-known cattle-dealer and farmer, and for nearly thirty years had been the shipping agent of the Midland Great Western Railway Company. He died on 19th January, 1915, leaving assets valued at about £5,000. By the will, which was now in dispute, he left the residue of his estate to the children of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret French. His son Arthur, the defendant, who was left a valuable farm, had filed the usual statutory pleas, and had been given special leave by the Court to file a plea of undue influence. When the case was called it was stated that the privilege of filing this plea would not be availed of, and that the jury might be discharged, an arrangement having been arrived at between the parties.

Mr. T. M. Healy, K.C., M.P., who, with Mr. M'Cann, K.C., and Mr. Cusack (instructed by Mr. Maurice Molony), appeared for the plaintiff, stated the position of affairs. Counsel added that they had agreed that the defendant should receive £100 out of the estate as costs.

Evidence was then given in support of the will by Mr. M. Molony, solicitor; Mr. J. J. Bowler, Captain J. P. Lavery, R.A.M.C., and Mrs. M. French.

The will was admitted to probate. The plaintiff was allowed his costs, and the defendant's costs, measured at £100, were also allowed out of the assets.

Mr. Henry, K.C., M.P.; Mr. Chambers, K.C., M.P., and Mr. Vincent Rice (instructed by Mr. Kerley) were for the defendant.

REDEMPTION OF RENT—Mrs. G. A. Sartoris, landlord; Charles D. Shackleton and Ebenezer Shackleton, lessees—The lessees applied to redeem a rent of £172 15/- arising out of part of the lands of Belan, called Bushey Park. At the hearing the lessor argued that the application should be dismissed on the ground that the holding was not agricultural or pastoral, but a mill holding, and also on the ground that the lessees were not in bona fide occupation, a portion being sub-let. Judgment was now delivered, the Commissioner being of opinion that the objections of the landlord that the holding was not substantially agricultural or pastoral could not be sustained. He fixed the price to be paid by the tenants at £300 cash and £2,300 3 per cent. Guaranteed Land Stock, for the latter of which an advance would be made.

Mrs. Creaghe has been for many years a victim to Hay Fever and Asthma. I can safely say she has tried every known remedy without success. This summer I first heard of Vaughan's Bronchial Cure, and I have much pleasure in stating that it gave immediate and lasting relief. Its effect in asthmatic affections is quite marvellous.

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

DUBLIN, FRIDAY EVENING.

The Dublin Stock and Share markets this morning experienced a very distinct change for the better, both in the volume of dealing passing and in the trend of prices in leading departments. In other words, representative securities were active and good, and the extent of the change in favour of holders was in some cases very striking and significant indeed. The buoyant tendency of the Funds, particularly Consols, was encouraging at such a time, and gave some people ideas that haute finance had gleaned information that was not common property. Consols rose 1⅛ to 59¼, and was up to 60 in London. War Loan 3½ p.c. Stock was scarce, and the 4½ p.c. Stock scored a further 1/16 advance. Bank of England Stock has quite recently risen about 10 points. As on yesterday reconstruction rumours were responsible for a very unsettled market in Dublin Distillers' shares. The Pref. finally declined 3s. to 65s., buyers, after dealing at 66s., 66s. 6d. The Ord., on the other hand, opened unchanged, at 12s., and rapidly ran up to 14s. on vague rumours that the Board's scheme for capital reduction will suggest some concessions from the rights of the Pref. holders to arrears of dividend due without full compensating advantages. Marconi Shares were very firm. Marconi "Marines" rose about 1s. 6d. to 31s. Home Rails were in demand. Great Southern and Western Ord. rose 1¼ to [illegible] and Great Northern Pref. ¼. In Trams, Dublin United Ord. rose ⅛, but Provincial Ord. fell 3d. Dunlop Rubber Ord. fell 4½d. to 4s. 6d., but Parent Tyre Def. rose 1½d. to 5s. 9d. The demand for most of the leading Textiles was again brisk for the other side. Bleachers were again very buoyant. The Ord. rose from 45s. to 60s. The Pref. were called 1 to 4½ unofficially, and the Debs. were held [illegible] against 8½ last price. Chartered were a strong feature, and rose 2s. 6d. to 13s. 6d. Rubber shares closed pretty firm.

LONDON STOCK MARKETS BUOYANT.

SUBSTANTIAL RISE IN CONSOLS.

HOME RAILS CONFIDENT.

(FROM OUR FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, FRIDAY.

The strength of the Stock Exchange has been in no way impaired by the approach of the week-end. The tone to-day was as buoyant as ever under the influence of the smashing victory of the Russians. The firm attitude of the Grand Alliance towards Greece also created a good impression, and, as the flow of investment resulting from dollar security sales to the Treasury has swept markets very bare of Stock, specialities respond sharply to moderate support. Purchasers during the last few days have repeatedly advanced their buying limits, and have, time after time, missed their market. There is very little Stock in the Colonial Government and Home Railway Prior Charge sections available at existing price levels. Home Government Securities generally displayed fresh strength. Consols spurted to 60, a gain of ¾. There were some mixed changes of ⅛ among Colonial descriptions, but gains predominated. New Zealand New Fours finished strongly at 83⅛, and remained the most active feature in the list. The Old Fours, together with Canadian Fours and New South Wales descriptions, were also fairly brisk.

FOREIGN BONDS CHEERFUL.

The appearance of the Foreign market was cheerful, Allied Securities affording many features of strength. Russian Fives rose a full point to 87. The 4½ p.c.'s were strong at 85⅝. Greek issues were not dealt in, and their tone remained heavy. Japanese Bonds received fair support, and closed with several small gains. There were some further gains averaging ½ among Chinese issues on hopes of a clearing of the political outlook. There was fresh support for Egyptians.

In the Home Railway market Prior Charge Stocks were readily absorbed where they offered. Midland 2½ p.c. Pref. was brisk around 52. North-Eastern 3 p.c. Debs. closed firmly at 65, while Midland 2½ p.c. Debs. changed hands at 54½ and Caledonian 4 p.c. Debs. at 82¼. The Heavies were brisk among junior descriptions. North-Westerns advanced vigorously, closing 1¼ up at 106½. Chathams gained ⅛ at 8¼. The 1st Pref. added ½, and the 2nd Pref. at 25⅜ was nearly a point up. Underground Electric Sixes weakened slightly. Scotch Stocks were steady.

AMERICANS HIGHER.

Price changes in the American market were almost uniformly favourable, and there was a fair number of markings in small lots. Chesapeakes were the best feature, jumping 3 to 70½ on good dividend forecasts. Ontarios at 29½ were a dollar up. There were numerous gains of ¼ to ½ in the general Railroad list. Norfolks added ¾ at 112. Steels put on ½ at 88½.

CANADIAN AND FOREIGN RAILS.

Canadian Pacifics receded ¼ to 185, and were not so active. Grand Trunks were not much dealt in, and one or two quotations rose ⅛ to ¼. The Guaranteed Fours rose ¼ to 62¼. Mexican Railway Ord. and 2nd Pref. fell 1 to 16 and 34 respectively. There were a few narrow mixed changes among Argentine Rails. Antofagasta issues were all strong, and the Def. jumped 1⅜ to 129½. Brazil Cum. Pref. rose 2 to 15½. United of the Havana added ½ at 83¼.

LONDON MINING MARKET.

Business in the Mining market was still on a light scale, and quotations did not, as a whole, participate to any extent in the buoyancy displayed in many other sections of the House. Kaffirs were steady to dull. East Rands were rather off colour on the reduced dividend. There was some spotty firmness among Rhodesians, and Diamonds met sufficient support to keep quotations tending on the up grade. Base Metal Shares were rather off colour, though there was no quotable change in quotations for copper or tin. The slump in the price of silver adversely affected silver mining descriptions, but Russians continued to show to advantage on the war news.

In the Kaffir section, Rand Mines opened well, but left off 1/- down. East Rands, on the other hand, after some heaviness, rallied. Goldfields Def. was up to 28/6. Gold Shares were steady to dull. Modder Leases were supported up to 37/9. Modderfonteins did not vary. Chartereds, among Rhodesians, gained 6d. at 13/3. Cam and Motors were up to 14/6 and Globe and Phœnix up to 25/6. INDUSTRIAL SHARES BUSY.

Among Miscellaneous securities there was a moderate volume of business. Shipping issues were still fairly active, despite irregularity. P. and O. Def. touched 340, and closed 1½ to the good at 337½. Royal Mails left off dull at 122. Furness Withys moved briskly around the previous quotation of 52/-. Khedival Mails and Prince Lines were cheerful. Marconis rose 9d. to 49/-. Brazilian Tractions, at 63¾, were ¼ to the good. Supply Shares showed irregularity. Liptons Pref. fell 6d. to 14/-. Lyons lost the turn. Van den Bergs, at 50/6, were 6d. to the good, and British Oil and Cake Mills were supported up to 24/-. Cements, though brisk, were hardly so firm. Courtaulds advanced strongly to 5⅜, and Coats Ord., at 5⅞, was 1/32 to the good. Armaments were quiet, with little variation. There were some small mixed changes in the Bank Share group.

Moving a resolution dealing with the proposed exchange of shares between the Kastner Kellner Alkali Company, Ltd., and Brunner, Mond and Co., Sir John said that the exchange was only an outward symbol of what they proposed. For the future it was their wish to aid each other, first in scientific research, and secondly in saving money. There was no intention to raise prices or squeeze customers. The resolution, which was carried unanimously, will be submitted to a further extraordinary general meeting.

COMMANDEERING DISTILLERIES

It has been decided that the grain whiskey distilleries will be allowed to continue manufacturing spirits for munition and industrial purposes, and be permitted to re-purchase any available surplus stock for their ordinary trade requirements. Highland malt distillers, who are being allowed to continue operations up till June 25, will next year be restricted to 70 per cent. of their normal output. So far none of the Scotch patent still distilleries has been taken over, although they are contributing a proportion of their output to the munition manufacturers.

MARKET REPORTS.

GRAIN.

DUBLIN CORN EXCHANGE,
June 9.

Weather of very wintry nature, with occasional heavy hail and rainfalls. A most uncertain state of affairs continues to overshadow the grain markets in all positions, and a further sharp drop in freight terms has caused another considerable reduction in wheat and maize rates over the week. Atlantic wheat prices are down a good 4/- to 5/- per quarter, Manitoba parcels to Liverpool showing the heaviest discounting. However, at the moment there appears to be some check to downward movement, as first-hand sellers are quoting stiffer. White wheats still find fair inquiry for France, and though lower on the week the reduction has not been so severe as in the case of red wheats. Flour very dull, and values bumping heavy on bottom level. Maize cargoes are about 2/6 per quarter cheaper. Still shipments are still on a very moderate scale, and few cargoes are pressed for sale. Our Corn Exchange to-day was very moderately attended, in view of a local race fixture attracting away many habitués. Very little business reported. Irish wheat scarce. Oats, in absence of demand, nominal, but holders easier. Blacks, 17/6 to 18/3; whites still about 19/- to 20/- and 21/-. Foreign wheat quoted 9d to 1/- cheaper, spot delivery. Irish flour another 6d. per cwt., and foreign 1/- per 280lbs. lower. Maize prices have collapsed to the extent of 2/6 per quarter on week, and Indian meal 10/- per ton. Bran and pollard continue with a cheaper tendency, but supplies are moderate.

Following are the quotations:—Irish Produce—Oats (per 196lbs.)—Black oats, 18/- to 18/6; whites, 19/6 to 21/-. Oatmeal (per 112lb.)—Pinhead, 21/- to 21/6; flakes, 21/- to 21/6. Flour (per 112lb.)—Patent, 19/6 to 20/-; firsts, 19/6 to 20/-; seconds, 19/6. Pollard, coarse, 10/6 to 10/9. Bran (per 112lb.)—White, 11/- to 11/3; red, 8/9 to 9/.

Foreign Produce.—Wheat (per 280lb.)—Blue stem, 34/9; Walla Walla, 34/6; Manitoba, 34/-. Maize (per 480lb.)—Plate, 53/. Flour (per 280lb.)—American winter patent, 46/- to 48/-; straight, clear, 44/- to 46/-; American spring patents, on spot, 46/- to 48/-; straight, fancy, 44/- to 46/-; Canadian and Manitoba, 44/- to 49/-. Canadian oatmeal (per 280lb.)—Pinhead, 18/- to 19/-; flake, 19/- to 19/6. Indian meal (per 112lb.)—White, 11/9 to 12/-; coarse, 10/6 to 10/9. (per 112lbs.)—Yellow, 13/9; bruised, 13/9.

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES (BALTIC), Friday.—WHEAT—Cargo market nominal, there being scarcely any inquiry on U.K. account, while Indian and Australian qualities are held above the market. Barusso (63lb.) arrived, 63/6 sellers; blue stem and white Walla afloat 60/6, June 57/6, July 56/6; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, June 51/. Parcels active and firmer; No. 1 Northern Manitoba arrived sold 50/6, shortly due 50/7½-50/9, shipped 50/5-51/-, tenderable afloat 50/6-51/-, May-June 50/9-51/-, June-July 50/9-51/3, July-August 51/3-52/-, August 51/9-52/3, August-September 52/-52/3. OATS nominal. BARLEY nominally unchanged. Superior Californian brewing expected August, sellers 61/-, and Bombay-Karachi, July 10th-August 50/. MAIZE dull and weak. Steamers of yellow La Plata on passage, sellers 54/6, June, also June-July, 52/6; sailers afloat (bags) 53/-, arrived out to load 52/6, and South African afloat 51/6. Parcels opened steadier, but closed quiet. La Plata May-June 48/-, June-July 46/3-46/6.

MARK LANE, Friday—ENGLISH WHEAT steadier; whites delivered up range to 52/6, reds 52/- per qr. 504lbs. Foreign grades firmer; No. 1 Northern Manitoba 54/9 landed, No. 2 do. 53/9 landed. FLOUR easier; Canadian exports patents 45/- to 46/- landed, Minneapolis 1st patents 46/- upwards landed, No. 1 Town Households 45/-. GRINDING BARLEY steady; American 43/6 landed, Plate 46/6 landed. OATS lower; Plate 31/6 upwards landed, American white clipped 34/- ex quay. MAIZE weaker; Plate 48/- landed. Grain arrivals this week—English—Wheat 380 qrs., barley 180 qrs., malt 1,530 qrs., oats 1,430 qrs., maize 500 qrs. Irish oats 1,190 qrs. Foreign—Wheat 123,650 qrs., barley 670 qrs., oats 95,460 qrs., peas 300 qrs., maize 7,330 qrs., flour 24,450 sacks.

LIVERPOOL, Friday.—American advices caused a more confident feeling to be displayed, and, under a natural reaction, coupled with better buying and an improved millers' demand, c.i.f. parcels of wheat advanced 9d. to 10½d. per quarter on yesterday's rates. Maize quiet in forward positions at 3d. to 6d. per quarter decline. WHEAT on the spot met a better demand, though prices were irregular at 1d. decline to 1d. per cental advance on Tuesday's market rates. MAIZE—Spot parcels attracted little attention, and prices of American mixed and River Plate showed a decline of 2½d. to 3d. per cental, while other growths were easier in sympathy. FLOUR showed little change, foreign being rather sparingly offered. BEANS, PEAS, BARLEY, and OATMEAL quietly steady at late rates. OATS were quiet and obtainable at 1d. less money. WHEAT CARGOES inactive. Parcels of No. 1 Manitoba, afloat, sold at 49/- to 49/4½, July-August 50/- to 50/6; No. 2 hard winter, June-July 46/3 to 46/4½ per quarter. MAIZE CARGOES neglected. In parcels, 41/6 per quarter was taken for American mixed June, and River Plate, May-June, quoted 45/- per quarter.

WAKEFIELD, June 9.—Very quiet trade all round. English wheats make 19/- per 192lb., or 1/- to 2/- down on the week; foreign also dropped 2/- to 4/- per quarter, and oats were also cheaper. Maize 1/- easier. Other feeding stuffs rather cheaper.

DERBY, June 9.—There was not a great deal of local wheat offering, and prices showed a reduction of 2/- compared with last week's rates. The trade generally was a little firmer as compared with Thursday's market; generally quiet. Wheat, 52/-; barley, 60/- to 61/-; oats, 36/-. No beans offering.

CATTLE.

BIRKENHEAD, Friday.—There were 1,050 cattle and 4,000 sheep and lambs on sale in the Birkenhead lairages to-day. Cattle met a slow firm trade, late rates governing most transactions. Sheep and lambs were a much easier trade, prices being 1d. a lb. lower; beef 1/- to 1/1, mutton 1/1, lamb 1/2 per lb. in sink.

HANBURY AND POTTERTON, Smithfield House, Dublin, Thursday, 8th June, 1916.—Numbers:—Cattle, 2,392—increase, 382; sheep, 11,541—increase, 2,925. Despite the large increase in numbers shown at market to-day, we had a fine healthy demand for all classes of meated animals. Best quality cattle made just late rates; others slightly lower. Sheep and lambs got all sold at a little somewhat less all round. Beef (best), 60/- to 70/- per cwt., live weight; others, 50/- to 60/-; mutton, 9d. to 1/- per lb.; lambs, 30/- to 60/- each.—(Advt.)

PROVISIONS.

LIVERPOOL, Friday.—BACON—There was again a steady tone prevalent in the Bacon Market for all descriptions of American, speculative products at Chicago showing a further improvement, and hogs decidedly dearer, though arrivals of bacon were again heavy. Buyers operated to a moderate extent, chiefly in Cumberland cut, which showed a partial advance of 6d. per cwt., and, though this represented the only quotable change, holders were rather more reserved in some of the other cuts. Irish and Canadian ruled steady at late rates, while Danish was held for 1/- per cwt. more money, though the demand generally was quiet. SHOULDERS were steadily held for late rates on all descriptions, buyers operating only to a moderate extent in any description. HAMS showed no quotable alteration for American or Canadian, the demand being of a moderate extent, chiefly for long cut of latter. LARD on the spot firm, and, with higher quotations from Chicago, prices were raised 6d. per cwt. on prime steam and American refined, with more business in the latter. CHEESE still quiet; late prices repeated for finest States and Canadian. BUTTER quiet; prices gave way about 1/- per cwt. on finest makes. EGGS ruled steady at late currencies. REFINED LARD FUTURES—Opening cable from Chicago unchanged. No further material alteration took place during the afternoon, market closing at an early decline. September sold at 74/4½ to 74/6; July quoted 73/3 to 73/4½ per cwt.

Increased supplies met fair demand, with slight decline in value of chilled beef, also fresh beef and mutton.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

LITTLE GREEN, June 9.—Supplies of butter moderate. Trade remains slow under strain of dear prices. In egg section offerings for spot and country are fair. PALM KERNELS—The tendency is still lower, and spot value is not over £19 10/-, July arrival £19 15/-, and August £20 per ton. New York 5 to 3 points advance.

HAY AND STRAW.

SMITHFIELD, June 9.—Small supply of the various classes of hay in market this morning, and a good attendance of buyers present, but, notwithstanding this, trade again ruled slow, even for choice loads, for which last day's rates were exceedingly hard to maintain. Old meadow sorts proved practically unsaleable, and a great number of loads were left on hands at a late hour. Fair-sized market of straw in poor demand at weaker prices. Quotations:—Choice first crop hay, 7/6 to 8/-, and a few extra fancy loads, 8/6 per cwt.; second and third crop, 6/- to 7/- per cwt.; best old meadow, 3/- to 4/- per cwt.; other grades at prices to clear. Straw, oaten, best, 2/6 to 3/-; inferior, 1/6 to 2/2; wheaten, best, 2/- to 2/6; inferior, 1/8 to 2/2 per cwt.

TRADE REPORT.

MANCHESTER, June 9.—There is nothing remarkably new here to-day, and cloth sellers having anything specially good to say of the market are comparatively few and far between. Nevertheless in some directions finishing cloths meet with a moderate demand, and printers move off fairly well. Light fabrics are quieter, and grey staples remain neglected. In various home trade fabrics there is fair activity reported. American yarns strong, and without fresh feature. Egyptians hampered by the very stiff rates ruling.

WOOL.

LONDON SALES, Friday.—The fourth series of London sales of Colonial wool, which commenced on 13th ult., closed yesterday, and Messrs. Schwartz, Bucanon, and Co., in their circular, say the net total available amounted to 70,000 bales. Of these, 62,000 bales have been sold, 57,000 bales for home consumption and 5,000 bales for foreign account, leaving 8,000 bales to be carried forward to next series. The sales were well attended, and the tone was firm. Net result of this series, as far as Merino is concerned, is a further rise of from 7½ to 10 per cent. Greasy wools, both good and ordinary, opened with a rise of 7½ per cent., and now stand 10 per cent. above previous level, except short wools, which are only 5 per cent over April-May values. Best scoureds, as well as the bulk of ordinary wools, have sold throughout at 7½ per cent. advance, while inferior and faulty wools are 15 per cent. dearer. The salient feature of these sales is that the recent high level for Merino wool has again been materially exceeded and a fresh record established. Some extraordinary prices were realised—45½d. for Queensland scoured fleece, 45d. for broken, and 36½d. for locks. Geelong greasy sold up to 23½d. Crossbreds have showed little change from previous sales, only the finer wools are 7½ per cent. dearer, while medium and coarse remain on a par with April-May, and in case of shabby lots often barely reach that level. Among Cape, long greasy is 10 per cent. over last series, ordinary greasy 5 per cent., good snow whites 5 per cent., and medium wools 10 per cent. Next series commence on Tuesday, 11th July.

SOUTH AFRICAN MINES AND BRITISH INDUSTRY.

Reuter's Agency learns that the South African gold mining industry, taking time by the forelock, has arrived at an important decision in connection with the safeguarding from German competition of British industry, which has come into its own since the commencement of the war. A contract has just been concluded between the majority of the mining groups on the Witwatersrand, to be followed, it is understood, by all the mining companies in Rhodesia, under which they will draw all their cyanide supplies during the war, and for five years thereafter, from the Cassel Cyanide Company, Ltd., Glasgow, a minor proportion of this supply being contributed by the British Cyanides Company. As Germany before the war supplied about three-quarters of the cyanide requirements of the mines, and Great Britain only one-quarter, and as the South African cyanide requirements amount to something like £500,000 sterling per annum, this is a practical and concrete instance of what can be done by concerted action.

DUBLIN AND DISTRICT.

Kingstown Shops Act Inspector.—At the Kingstown Urban Council meeting yesterday, Mr. J. J. Kennedy (Chairman) presiding, Mr. James Monks, Glenageary, was elected Shops Act Inspector.

Postponed Bank Holiday.—A proclamation was posted in the city last evening informing the public of the substitution of August 8th as a bank holiday, in lieu of Whit-Monday. The proclamation bore the names of the Lord Chief Justice, the Attorney-General, and the Under-Secretary.

Removing Rebellion Ruins.—Some alarm was occasioned yesterday by the sound of explosions in the city. It subsided when it became known that they were due to the blowing-up of the ruins of buildings in the Sackville street area, which now presents a very bare and desolate appearance.

N.S.P.C.C. and Child-Neglect.—The National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children investigated 3,447 complaints of neglect and cruelty in England, Wales, and Ireland during the month of April. Of the 3,238 completed cases 3,145 were found true, affecting the welfare of 9,799 children, and involving 4,034 offenders. In the Dublin Branch during the same month 77 cases were dealt with, affecting 228 children.

Heavy Hailstorm in Dublin.—A fierce hailstorm occurred yesterday soon after 1 o'clock. It lasted only for a short time, but was of great intensity, and caused everyone in the streets to rush for shelter. The hailstones were, in cases, more than a quarter of inch in diameter, and struck the ground with considerable force. Discharges of lightning took place at the same time. The day was a humid one, and there were periods of bright sunshine.

Mass for Executed Rebels.—A Mass for the repose of the souls of Messrs. J. J. Heuston, Wm. Pearse, and P. H. Pearse, who were executed for taking part in the rebellion, was celebrated at 11 a.m. yesterday in St. Saviour's Church, Dominick street, by Rev. Finbar Ryan, O.P. There was no sermon. The Mass was attended by a full congregation, and outside the church, after the conclusion of the Service, a crowd, composed largely of women, sang, rather feebly, "God save Ireland," and cheered as they recognised relatives of the deceased men. One woman waved a green sunshade, and one or two favours of the Irish republican colours were worn by persons in the gathering, which dispersed gradually.

Dean's Grange Burial Board.—Mr. J. J. Kennedy, Vice-Chairman, presided at a meeting of Dean's Grange Burial Board yesterday. A letter was received from the relatives of Mr. Woodcock, of Thomas street, Dublin, asking permission to disinter the body of their brother, who had been buried there, and who had been killed accidentally in the recent rising. The permission was granted. The Registrar (Mr. J. G. Dunne) asked permission to apply to Sir John Maxwell for fees with regard to payment for soldiers who were buried in the cemetery owing to the recent rising. He understood the authorities of Mount Jerome and Glasnevin were making such applications. It was decided that the Registrar should deal with the whole matter, and communicate with the military authorities.

CHIEF CROWN SOLICITORSHIP.

At a meeting of the Council of the Southern Law Association, held at 26 South Mall, Cork, on the 8th June, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

That we, the members of the Council of the Southern Law Association, heartily congratulate Henry Arthur Wynne, LL.D., a member of our Council, on his appointment to the important office of Chief Crown Solicitor in Ireland, gained by his ability and character in our profession.

The mystery of the missing Wellington College boy, John Carling, has been solved. It will be recalled that he disappeared without any apparent reason on May 4th, after he had been seen into a train at Charing Cross on his way back to college. He was discovered this week in a famous regiment, having enlisted as a private shortly after his disappearance.

APPEALS.

"HELP THE POOR TO HELP THEMSELVES."

THE BEST WAY TO RELIEVE THE DISTRESS now in Dublin is by giving employment. The City Labour Yard, now under the management of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul at Vicar street, gives employment to about 50 men per day.

The Committee confidently appeals to the charitable public of all denominations to assist them in this work (which aims at helping those who are in distress and at the same time willing to work) by sending subscriptions or by purchasing tickets at 3d. each. Each ticket entitles a man to a day's work at a minimum wage of 1/- per day. One can also help by ordering Chips at 2/- per cwt., Logs at 25/- per ton, Sawdust at 20/- per ton, or bundles at 3/6 per 100; Dipped, 6d. extra. Customers are requested to send cash with the order, or pay on delivery. Donations or subscriptions will be gratefully received and acknowledged by JAMES O'DEA or W. A. RYAN, at 7 VICAR STREET, or any member of the Committee.

APPEAL.

To enable Protestant Children on the West Coasts to attend School, who will kindly send Pieces of Material of any kind, or Children's Worn Clothes, to Mrs. Beresford Massy, Hermitage, Greystones, Co. Wicklow?
